500 MOOSERS MARCH ON FOSS WITH PETITION

Five hundred Massachusetts Progressives marched through the rain to the State House today to present a petition to Governor Foss asking that he call a special session of the Legislature to pass a direct senatorial election bill in order that the next United States Senator from this State be elected directly by the people.

The paraders carrying American flags and bandanna handkerchiefs left the Progressive headquarters at No. 70 Devonshire street at 1 o'clock under the leadership of Wendell P. Thore. A few minutes before the parade left a letter from Governor Foss was read denying the petition for a personal interview which the Progressives had asked. The noon rally was in active session at the time and amid cheers it was announced that the march to the State House would be made in any event.

Mr. Thore led his following along Devonshire to Court street. Up Court to Tremont, and along that to the Kimball building, where a stop was made in front of the Republican State headquarters. A committee was chosen from the ranks to call on the chairman of the Republican committee and request the assistance of the Republicans in trying to secure the special session.

This committee was met by Charles E. Hatfield, chairman of the Republican State Committee. He accepted the request and gave the committee a cordial reception, but declined to participate in presenting the petition to the Governor.

The Petition.

The petition read:

To His Excellency the Governor of Massachusetts:

The undersigned committee, representing the members of the Progressive party, having called upon the Republican party and the Democratic party to join with them, respectfully petition that the Governor and Council, exercising the powers conferred upon them by the Constitution of the Commonwealth, call at once a special session of the Legislature, in order that a law may be passed by which the people may decide, by direct vote, what man they want as the next United States Senator from Massachusetts. This will enable the next Legislature to elect the man chosen by the people.

The Progressives then marched to No. 15 Beacon street, where a stop was made in front of the Democratic headquarters and the same request sent to the Democrats that had been made to the Republicans. Judge Thomas P. Riley, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, received the request and wished the Progressives success, but declined to participate.

While the Bull Moose delegation was waiting in front of the Democratic head quarters a copy of the letter sent by Chairman Riley to Matthew Hale of the Progressives and Chairman Hatfield of the Republican committee was distributed among the members by the Democrats. This letter contained a record of the votes by parties for the direct election of United States Senators as held in the last Legislature. Records of the votes on the Federal income tax bill and the Corrupt Practises Act were als cited.

Chairman Riley said that he took this means of setting forth these facts as his challenge for an open discussion of the different party principles Matthew Hale had ignored.

Boston to Build Great Hamburg Pier and Drydock

Port Directors Plan to Be Ready for Steamships in May.

F. J. M'ISAAC.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—In return for the coming of the Hamburg-American line of steamships to Boston, with first cabin passenger service, to begin May 1 to Cherbourg, Southampton and Hamburg, Boston will at once begin the greatest port development in the history of the city.

Boston will start the construction of a great passenger pier on the Commonwealth Dock, South Boston.

Boston will construct a drydock, which will be capable of containing the largest ship afloat, or that is likely to be afloat for many years.

Boston's port directors will seek immediately authority from the Governor's Council to expend a large proportion of the $9,000,000 voted by the State in making these improvements.

Well-Defined Program.

In other words, from now on, the port program of Boston is clearly defined, and will be steadily and aggressively carried forward.

The Hamburg line will put into operation the Cleveland and Cincinnati, 16,500 ton ships.

In November the company will establish a Boston-Mediterranean service, and in 1914 the steamer Amerika, 22,500 tons, the most popular ship of all the Hamburg fleet at present, is to be placed in the Boston service.

The following year the Kaiserin August Victoria, 25,000 tons, and the largest ship of the line at present, will come to Boston.

These positive promises were made to the Boston delegation which visited Herr Albert Ballin, director-general of the Hamburg line, in his apartments at the Hotel Plaza last night by the Hamburg leader.

Boston's promises in return were made

CALLS WORLD UNDER DEBT TO BOSTON FOR COMMERCE CONGRESS

The entertainment of the delegates to the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce by the city of Boston and the Chamber of Commerce is praised by William B. Bunker, United States delegate from the Far West and delegate from the San Francisco Chamber, in the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce Journal. "A Lesson in Civic Enterprise and Hospitality," Mr. Bunker calls it, and he says:

The Boston Chamber of Commerce and the city of Boston may point with pride to the entertainment of the 825 delegates to the fifth International Congress of Chambers of Commerce. Better still, the Chamber and the city may point with pleasure to the results of that entertainment.

The Chamber and Boston invested $150,000 in this entertainment enterprise. They also gave freely thought and time.

The investors were inspired by high ideals and civic pride. The Chamber had invited the Congress to Boston, and Chamber and city knew the necessity and advantage of working as one. And so they worked. . . .

There is a spirit of hospitality that cannot be shown in words. And it was this spirit that caught the fancy. The Chamber committee had studied the various nationalities to good purpose and succeeded in suiting every taste.

In a sense, the set topics of the Congress were merely incidental. The mingling of delegates from the four corners of the earth, the exchange of ideas on all sorts of subjects, the personal contact and the practical demonstration of the fact that good fellowship is not a question of geography—these, after all, were the best results of the Boston entertainment.

And for these results Boston has put the world under obligation. San Francisco is obliged to Boston for having emphasized the fact that a modern Chamber of Commerce is a potent factor in community development, and, properly sustained by a community, may make that community the envy of an entire country.

Business Men Hail Coming of Big Boats as Help to Boston.

Boston public men united today in congratulating the Port Directors, the Mayor and the city, on the decision of the big German line to come here.

Joseph B. Russell.

Joseph B. Russell, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said:

It means a great deal to the port of Boston to establish a great line of steamers that has never been here before, and it means that the highest praise should be given to General Bancroft and his associates in the Board of Port Directors as well as to the members of the Chamber of Commerce who have had this subject at heart and brought it to such a happy ending.

I think the fact that the line has determined to come here is proof that the subject of rail transportation has been duly investigated and that satisfactory assurances have been received by the steamship officials and by the Port Directors that whatever freight is acquired by the new line will be brought for shipment with due expedition

The announcement by Herr Ballin is a most auspicious event. I am sure that it marks the beginning of the real development of our port.

It seems to me that it must lead other lines to establish services here and that our great ambition again to make Boston one of the really great seaports of the world is about to be realized

No line can be supported on local pride and patriotism, however, and our people must all give their best endeavors to make this move on the part of the Hamburg-American line a paying one. If this is done, and I believe it will be, we shall not only have more frequent sailings and bigger ships of the Hamburg-American line, but we shall attract the attention of other steamship interests and the port of Boston will attain the commercial greatness to which we aspire.

Bernard J. Rothwell.

Bernard J. Rothwell, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, said:

The coming of the new line will be the most important addition to Boston shipping that this port has known in many years.

The significant thing about this achievement of the port directors is that the new line will bring many Northern European ports much nearer in effect to Boston than they have ever been before, because both Hamburg and Southampton are great distributing centres from which American goods can with facility be transferred to smaller steamers carrying them to many more distant ports.

Hamburg is one of the greatest transhipping ports in the world, having direct communication with ports in Finland, the Scandinavian countries and the North Sea, where we ought to be able to send general cargoes, flour, grain, boots and shoes, clocks, sewing machines, plated ware, brass goods and many other articles of New England manufacture.

Southampton has great facilities for trans-shipping to various ports on the coast of Scotland, where we ought to

Red Sox "Mascot" Gets $200 as Share in World's Series

Young Jerry McCarthy, the official mascot of the champion Red Sox, has received his end of the world's series and is the happiest boy in the world. A letter with a check inclosed for $200 was received by Jerry from Treasurer McRoy of the Red Sox. Following is the letter:

> In this moment of our good fortune the club wishes to show in some way their appreciation of the many happy moments your winning efforts and song have provided, and with this in view the club tenders its check for $200. Just as the Red Sox excel in the position in baseball, just as do you excel in the position called "mascot." With kindest regards and best wishes,

> ROBERT R. McROY, Treasurer.

Jerry was in a happy mood when seen today, and talked about the Red Sox and the men connected with the club.

"The Red Sox are a fine bunch of fellows," he said, "and deserved to win the world's championship. They will clean them all up next season and probably for several seasons to come.

"This money I received is going into the bank on Monday, with a little more money I have earned. I have been singing out in Malden all this week and received some money, and Mr. John I. Taylor, the best-hearted man in the world, gave me a present, and this will also go into the bank. The money that I put in the bank is going to put me through college as soon as I finish my studies in the English High School.

PLANS APPEAL IN FIGHT TO ESCAPE THE DEATH CHAIR

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Police Lieutenant Charles Becker is in the Tombs today, the convicted murderer of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

He was indicted as the instigator of the assassination. The jury's verdict was "Guilty of murder in the first degree." The penalty is death.

The verdict was returned one hundred days, almost to the hour, after Rosenthal was shot.

Becker's attorneys at once began planning an appeal.

The verdict against Becker caused panic today among the four gunmen who are accused of being the actual assassins of Rosenthal.

Reports were current at the Tombs that "Gib the Blood," "Lefty Louie," "Whitey" Lewis and "Dago Frank," now under indictment for murder in the first degree, had already sent word to District Attorney Whitman that they were willing to confess and plead guilty to second degree murder.

BELIEVE WHITMAN WOULD REFUSE PLEAS.

This communication to the District Attorney was not made by counsel for the four accused gunmen, but made its way to the office of the District Attorney in the subterranean fashion used by prisoners in the Tombs. Such information often reaches the District Attorney before it does the prisoner's own counsel.

There was every indication, however, that Mr. Whitman would refuse to receive second degree pleas of guilty from any of the gunmen.

In any case, however, none of the gunmen will be brought to trial immediately. "Boston Red Phil" Davidson, the East Side gangman who shot and killed "Big Jack" Zelig, will be brought to the bar next. He will face Justice Goff on the same day that the latter will sentence Becker—Wednesday, October 30.

To Try Gunmen Separately.

The trial of the gunmen separately, since they have asked for separate trials, and under the law must be granted that privilege, will follow quickly upon the disposal of the Davidson case. The latter is

NEW DOW BAIL OF $25,000 CASH

Stephen R. Dow, the former stock broker and mining promoter, who is charged with larceny of $146,000 from copper companies of which he was president, was indicted in ninety-two counts by the Suffolk Grand Jury and was rearrested this noon on an indictment warrant.

The arrest took place at the Suffolk County Courthouse. Dow was taken before Chief Justice Aiken of the Superior Court.

Assistant District Attorney Webber, who conducted the Dow investigation before the Grand Jury, moved that new sureties be placed at $50,000 bail in good securities or $25,000 cash. The sureties on Dow's former $50,000 bond have not proved satisfactory to the District Attorney's office.

Attorney Williams, counsel for Dow, produced twenty-five $1,000 bills. When these were passed over, Dow was permitted to go.

Dow was indicted by the Suffolk Grand Jury today in ninety-two counts, charging the following:

Larceny.

SCHEPPS GETS DEATH THREAT BY TELEPHONE

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Sam Schepps, whose story along with those of Rose, Vallon and Webber convicted Becker, received a death threat over the telephone today because of the part he played in the Becker trial. Some one called up the West Side prison and said that Bernard Sandler, Schepps' lawyer, wanted to speak to him. When Schepps answered he received the following message over the wire: "You may get turned out of the West Side Prison today, but if you do you'll never leave the country alive.

not expected to occupy the Special Term under Justice Goff very long, since there are eyewitnesses of the shooting of Zelig, and Davidson can easily be identified.

"All the gunmen under indictment will be brought to trial as rapidly as possible," declared District Attorney Whitman.

Of the four gunmen "Dago Frank" and "Lefty Louie" were the hardest hit by the Becker verdict. Immediately after breakfast was over, they sent for Charles G. F. Wahle, their lawyer. Mr. Wahl informed his clients that he would be at the Tombs during the morning.

Becker Calm Today.

When Thomas Rohen, the keeper who has charge of the tier of cells in one of which, No. 112, Becker is lodged, tried to sympathize with the prisoner by saying "Too bad, Becker," the prisoner snapped out, "Judicial murder!"

Becker carried out the same prison routine as usual. During the time for exercising he vigorously went through calisthenics in the corridor, walked as briskly as the cramped space allowed, then ate a hearty breakfast. Then Becker called for Warden John Hanley and asked the latter to send for John F. McIntyre, Becker's chief counsel. He said he wanted to go over the whole situation with his lawyer.

Wife Swoons at Verdict.

Becker heard the jurors' report without a tremor, though the shock was great. His wife, who has been brave and cheerful through every moment of the trial, waited in the judge's room, upstairs, with members of her family.

When she heard the verdict she swooned, but recovered after a physician had been summoned, and bade her husband a pathetic farewell just before he was led into the "Bridge of Sighs" on his return to his cell.

Becker, following the verdict, was remanded till October 30. At that time, unless an appeal has brought about a stay of proceedings, he will be sentenced. The police lieutenant denounced Justice Goff's charge to the jury as "unfair" and as "summing up for the State."

Attorney John W. Hart of counsel for Becker stated this afternoon that the appeal in behalf of Becker would be made on the ground that Justice Goff had charged the jury in a manner prejudicial to the defendant, and had also failed to rule on the validity or invalidity of the testimony of Schepps as an accomplice to Rose in the Rosenthal murder.

The appeal will be filed as soon as Becker is sentenced.

Becker, immediately after the verdict was announced, gave the following statement to the AMERICAN'S representative:

"I Am Innocent," Declares Becker.

Though convicted of murder in the first degree I have no fear. I know that I am innocent. The truth will prevail in the end.

I was disappointed, as I did not believe that any twelve men would accept the story told by my accusers.

While I hoped to be acquitted, I did not believe that the final result would be worse than a disagreement.

I HAD ABSOLUTELY NOTHING TO DO WITH THE KILLING OF HERMAN ROSENTHAL. I NEVER SUGGESTED IT IN ANY WAY.

I wanted to be a witness in my own behalf. I believe I could have explained away all the suspicious circumstances. But I was forced to abide by the decision of my counsel.

Blot on Judicial System.

Though the murder of Rosenthal was a terrible thing, I believe if the verdict of this jury is carried on to its legal effect, the judicial murder of Charles Becker will be an everlasting blot upon the judicial system of the Empire State.

I do not believe that I had the fair and impartial trial which is guaranteed to all men under our laws. When this case is reviewed, the injustice of the court proceedings which resulted in my conviction will be apparent.

I am confident that I will be granted a new trial, and if I am tried at a time when public clamor does not demand a victim, I believe that I will be acquitted.

I do not personally care much for this verdict, but I feel the blow that it will inflict upon the woman that bears my name, and who has borne more than her share of the burden since my arrest on this charge.

Will Appeal Case.

My case will be appealed without delay, and in my opinion there can be no other result than a reversal of this unjust verdict.

Becker today was calm in his cell in the Tombs, his only worry, apparently, being for his wife, whose health is delicate. Becker feared that the ordeal through which she had passed might be fatal to herself and the child soon to be born.

The jurors actually deliberated seven hours and forty-five minutes. As a result of advice from Justice Goff that they should refrain from discussing their action, the majority refused today to tell the secrets of the jury room, but it was learned that at no time in their deliberation had there been a question as to Becker's guilt. The matter that taxed their hearts and intelligences was the degree—whether they should find a verdict that would mean death or a verdict that would mean life imprisonment.

The jury took three decisive ballots in all during their deliberations. The first poll showed that eight were for conviction for murder in the first degree and the other four were for murder in the second degree.

The jurors stood ranged on either side in these respective numbers during a course then of several polls. At no time did they consider acquittal or even manslaughter. The majority at all times held out for conviction in the first degree with the opposition for second degree. Verbal poll after poll had been taken. Then there was again a lengthy deliberation and argument.

Then the jury balloted again.

The vote now showed that ten were for conviction for murder in the first degree and two were for conviction in the second degree. With the sides now divided again, there were several polls taken which always resulted in ten for first degree and two for second degree. The longest debate and deliberation of the evening then began.

As midnight was approaching, it became evident that the two who had been holding out for conviction in the second degree had decided to join their fellows. The final decisive ballot was taken and a verdict of guilty in the first degree obtained.

In a statement after the verdict, John F. McIntyre, Becker's counsel, said:

> I was very much surprised at the the attitude of the Court toward the testimony of Schepps at Hot Springs. Before the verdict was rendered I requested the Court to allow the jurors to look over this testimony. The request was denied, and I took exception to the Court's ruling.
> I called the Court's attention then to a letter that I had written to the court regarding this matter, but even my request that this letter be made of the record was denied. This testimony of Schepps, I am sure, played a vital part in the determination of the verdict against my client. I will prepare at once for further proceedings to gain Becker's liberty.

District Attorney Whitman said:

"The verdict speaks for itself. I could not be expected to make any other comment."

In answer to further questions, Mr. Whitman said:

> We shall go ahead with the prosecution of the remainder of the Rosenthal murderers as rapidly as possible. the gunmen, "Gib the Blood," "Whitey Lewis," "Dago Frank" and "Lefty Louie" have applied for separate trials. Under the law the request must be granted.

Try Davidson Next.

> I will move for a special panel of veniremen from which the jury for the first of these trials may be selected, on the first opportunity. It has not been decided which of the gunmen will be tried first. Philip Davidson, the murderer of Jack Zelig, will be placed on trial next Wednesday.

Mrs. Becker was the most pathetic figure of the dramatic closing scenes of the lieutenant's trial.

As the crowd filed out of the courtroom after the judge's charge, Mrs. Becker crossed to where her husband sat. He placed his arm around her tenderly and patting her shoulder, said:

Don't worry. It will come out all right.

The wife's cheeks were red and she was palpably in distress. She, too, resented the language of the judge. "The charge was bitterly unfair," she said. "Why, it was a better summing up than Mr. Moss made. Any one who heard it must believe it was delievered to convict my husband."

Lieutenant Becker, with his wife and his counsel, retired to the detention room, but after half an hour the lawyers left the husband and wife together. Soon after 7 o'clock Lieutenant Becker went back to his cell in the Tombs for supper. Mrs. Becker then went upstairs to the judges' chamber. There she waited the jury's decision with John Becker, the defendant's brother, his wife and a girl cousin.

As Becker walked toward the entrance to the Bridge of Sighs he smiled back at his wife, but she suddenly threw her hands to her face and staggered into the arms of her women companions. They half-carried her to a waiting taxicab. Becker went on to his cell in the Tombs.

MRS. BECKER AT TOMBS TODAY TO SEE HUSBAND

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Charles A. Becker, who collapsed after hearing the verdict demanding death in the electric chair for her husband, was in a state bordering on nervous hysteria today at her home, but as soon as she was able to get out of bed she insisted upon going down to the Tombs to see her husband.

Mrs. Becker plainly showed the terrific strain she had undergone. Her lips were drawn and her eyes had the look that comes from continuous worry and little sleep. But she is strong willed and outwardly she bore up bravely.

"I feel better," she said today, "but I do not want to talk to anyone, newspaper men or anyone else. I want to see my husband."

She is being looked after by Frederick H. Hawley, the former reporter who testified for Becker during the trial.

He made the arrangements for Mrs. Becker's visit to the Tombs, and when she was ready he accompanied her.

Weeps in Husband's Arms.

The wonderful composure which Mrs. Becker, who is in a delicate condition, had shown throughout the trial was broken at last by the news of the verdict. She waited the jury's decision, sitting in the Judge's chambers, surrounded by John Becker, the brother, his wife and a girl cousin, besides two court officers. She went to the judge's chamber when Becker was led from the detention pen to face the jury.

When the news was brought to her that her husband had been found guilty, she nearly swooned. She fell forward in her chair and would have fallen out had not her brother-in-law caught her and supported her.

A physician was called and gave her restoratives. After about ten minutes she was able to leave the room, and, supported by the family group, was led upstairs to the prison pen to condole with her husband. As she entered the door her husband clasped her in his arms. Mrs. Becker burst into tears and Becker tried to calm her.

She clung to him for more than a minute, and then two women companions touched her, but she did not move. Becker kissed her again and again, and finally whispered something to her.

"It will come out all right," he said. Finally Mrs. Becker stepped back, and with a parting kiss the couple separated. As Becker walked toward the entrance to the Bridge of Sighs, he smiled back at his wife, but she suddenly threw her hands to her face and staggered into the arms of her women companions. They half carried her to a waiting taxicab.

Mrs. Becker never lost sight of her husband during the day. She occupied her regular seat in the corner of the court room when the court was in session, but the moment the judge left the bench she was on her way to join her husband.

Not only did she remain as near as possible to him in the court room, but when the jury went out she accompanied him back to the detention pen and spent the whole evening there with him—something, so far as known, without precedent in trials of this nature in this State.

Agitated During Judge's Charge.

During Judge Goff's charge to the jury, Mrs. Becker, far from imitating the stolidity of her husband's demeanor, gave repeated signs of extreme agitation. Her gloves were twisted into a ball in her hands, and once or twice she leaned forward as though on the point of interrupting the judge. But her self-control prevailed and she sank back.

As soon as the judge finished and the jury filed out of the room she was on her feet and forcing her way to her husband's side. Together they passed out of the court room and disappeared in the detention pen, where against the law and the prison rules, she spent the waiting hours in her husband's company.

As she left the courtroom her remarkable self-possession nearly deserted her. She was very pale. Her figure swayed slightly as she climbed the stairs to the sheriff's office and made her way to the pen.

"What do you think of the judge's charge?" she was asked.

"I think it was a continuation of the prosecution," she answered bitterly.

As she weakly mounted the stairs, leaning heavily on the railing, some one complimented her on her fortitude.

"I had to keep up," she answered. "I couldn't let him see me break down. If I had he might have gone to pieces, too. That is the secret of my self-control."

Mrs. Becker dined with her husband in the prison pen, their meal being served from a neighboring restaurant, and together they waited through the seemingly interminable hours for the verdict.

(Copied from Smart French Models)

Note the simplicity with which the plumes are adjusted, and yet the graceful outlines maintained. As always, the feather hat is the real dress hat, and these are shown in innovations that cannot fail to win approval from devotees of fashion. Many of the hats are in shapes suggestive of the Directoire period. The Tam-o-shanter crowns are quite a feature.

The New York Sailors are wonderfully popular—straight brim in front with a slight roll toward the back, and simply trimmed with Jacqueline rose. Black and white are leading favorites with a brilliant bit of color, taupe is much worn, and all the new colors have representation.

Sex Education in Schools Is Urged by Physicians

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The matter and methods of sex education in schools and colleges was discussed at the New York Academy of Medicine by the American Society of Sanitary and Moral Prophylaxis.

"Teachers should be supplied in the public schools as rapidly as they can be found," said Professor Balliett. "It is a simple matter to find young persons who are desirious of gaining this knowledge—students with the proper spirit—but it is not so easy to find the right kind of men and women to impart the knowledge to them.

"The most effective plan for leading the young student to see sex questions in their proper light is to give him good literature on the subject.

"Reproduction in nature, evolution, ethical relations in the home, parental love, heredity—all should be made plain to the growing boy or girl, and it will then be comparatively simple to make them realize that it is of especial benefit to them to know the problems of sex."

Donor of $750,000 to Tech Played Games Just Before He Died

While he was dying in his apartment at the Hotel Beaconsfield, Charles H. Pratt, whose bequest of $750,000 to Tech is being contested, played dominoes with his nurs, Miss Lucy D. Phelps, according to her testimony in the Probate Court today. Miss Phelps declared the millionaire taught her the fine points of the game, and that he used to do the counting on a board.

Miss Phelps said she told Pratt her treatment was prayer. She said she had given him absent treatment, and she said her prayer was just as effective whether he was cognizant of it or not. Miss Phelps said Pratt appeared wholly rational at the time he signed his will, and up till the date of his death on May 7, last. Contestants of the will alleged Pratt was of unsound mind when he made his will.

Miss Phelps said that Pratt seemed greatly interested in the news of the Titanic disaster last April, and deplored the fate of some of his friends.

Czarevitch Nihilist Victim

New Royal Mystery in Russia

Many Rumors About Prince's Illness, but Court Officials Are Very Secretive.

ODESSA, Oct. 25.—The eight-year-old Czarevitch, Grand Duke Alexis, who is dangerously ill at the imperial hunting lodge in Spala, Russian Poland, is the victim of a Nihilist attack, according to a report which is gathering strength here with every hour.

The Odetsky Litoske has published what it alleges are the inside facts of the case.

The attack on the Czarevitch is the culmination of an oath of vengeance which was registered at the birth of the long-hoped for male heir to the Romanoff throne over eight years ago.

The story goes on to say that the Czarevitch was neither shot in hunting nor fell from his pony, but was stabbed in the thigh by a Nihilist named Wassiliew. This Nihilist obtained a position as gardener. He brought forged recommendations.

Once established, Wassiliew was in a position to carry out the deadly plot. He was in an inconspicuous post, which would not receive especially vigilant watch. Doubtless the young Grand Duke played near him often.

How the details of the plot were carried out the Odetsky Litoska does not relate, but, if the main facts are granted, it is easy to see that the plan could be executed.

Nihilist venegance, the terror of the Romanoffs, waits patiently, never forgets and strikes swiftly. Such a plot against the Czarevitch—the hope of the Romanoff—is not inconsistent with their propaganda.

Admiral a Suicide.

The suicide of Rear Admiral Chagin, commander of the Czar's yacht Standart, has added one more to the series of rumors concerning the cause of the serious illness of the Czarevitch. This rumor is that Rear Admiral Chagin killed himself through remorse because the eight-year-old Czarevitch, was injured while playing aboard the Standart, that the boy's present serious illness is a result of the injury and that Chagin felt responsible for the safety of the royal heir, as he was in charge of the yacht.

The condition of the boy was worse today.

Peritonitis has set in and an operation will probably be necessary. Prayers are still said daily in the churches throughout Russia. An abscess developed from the wound, and the corps of doctors in attendance now numbers six.

The young Grand Duke Alexis is at the imperial hunting lodge at Spala, Russian Poland.

Then a story started that the wound was the result of a shot fired with intent to slay the boy.

Kidney disease, leaving one of the kidneys seriously affected, is another explanation.

A Double Suicide.

Now the suicide of Rear Admiral Chagin has given rise to the story that the boy hurt himself aboard the Standart. One version is that he tried to climb a mast and fell, another that he was injured while imitating sailors diving.

It was first rumored that Chagin killed himself for unrequited love. But his sweetheart, who was said to have jilted him, cut her own throat when told of the rear admiral's suicide and fell dead. Her act disposes, it is believed, of the theory of a broken love affair.

Chagin's suicide was more than usually dramatic. He occupied a flat in the capital when not on duty. His household consisted of two valets. He arranged his affairs deliberately. He wrote the following note:

"I ask that nobody be accused of my death."

WARN 8 PLACES OF SMALLPOX

The Board of Health of Clinton has sent out notices to the Boards of Health in Boston and seven other cities and towns in the State, warning them that persons are living in these places who are liable to infection from smallpox in Clinton and South Lancaster.

The places notified, in addition to Boston, include Chelsea, Hudson, Littleton, Sterling, Harvard, Leominster and Northboro.

Clinton Hospital and South Lancaster Academy are under strict quarantine and the health authorities of surrounding towns are taking emergency measures.

Wherever a person has been in the affected districts and has gone away with a possibility of infection, the health board of Clinton has traced them if possible and forwarded notice to the health board where the suspect is.

Students at the Lancaster Academy are kept under close guard. Ivan Cousins broke the quarantine and went to Leominster, where he lives. He was arrested when he arrived in Leominster Square and was taken back to Lancaster.

All cats in the quarantined district in Lancaster are being killed. Women who have pet Angoras are told that the cats must be taken away to be fumigated. These cats never come back.

Five families have been quarantined in Sterling.

Anyone coming from Lancaster, whether a resident there or having been there merely on busines, is hustled along through the other towns. Several book agents who inadvertently entered the quarantine zone, have found themselves unwelcome anywhere else.

Compulsory vaccination is being administered by wholesale.

Clinton's plumbing inspector came to Boston, secured 700 vaccine points and ordered 300 more sent. One Clinton woman who refused to be vaccinated was told that she would be arrested, held firm by policemen and would then be vaccinated, willy-nilly. She decided to yield.

A Leominster girl who had been at Lancaster Academy went home, but was ordered back to Lancaster by the Leominster authorities.

The Worcester Consolidated Street Railway has requested all its conductors and motormen on lines traversing the affected territories to be vaccinated.

The Bigelow Carpet Company and Clinton Wire Cloth Company of Clinton are providing free vaccination for 1,500 operatives.

ROYAL
ABSOLUTELY PURE

Cooking is a matter which concerns the whole family, and under modern methods and conveniences it is made so attractive the whole family is becoming interested, if not taking part in it.

"These biscuits are delicious; this cake is excellent," says the father. "I made them," says the daughter, and both father and daughter beam with pleasure.

It is a crime, with our modern agencies, helps and facilities, to have soggy biscuit, or wooden cake, or leaden pastry.

Royal Baking Powder has made home baking a success, a pleasure and a profit, and the best cooking today the world over is done with its aid.

FREDERICK S. DEITRICK LEADS FOR CONGRESS IN DISTRICT EIGHT

CAMBRIDGE DEMOCRAT BELIEVES IN "FIGHTING HARDEST WHEN YOU ARE DEAD CERTAIN."

Frederick S. Deitrick of Cambridge, tall young attorney with the winning smile of a boy, is just as sure of being elected to Congress next month as you are that you are sitting here with this paper in your hands.

The district is the new Eighth. It comprises the cities of Cambridge, Medford and Melrose and the towns of Arlington, Belmont, Lexington, Stoneham, Wakefield, Watertown and Winchester.

"A Democratic district as sure as you're born," Mr. Dallinger was telling somebody, "even if the Progressive party had not come into being. As it is ——"

"What you ought to be doing then, Fred," said his caller, "is looking around for an apartment in Washington. Why don't you take it easy?"

"Not at all," said the tall young Cambridge attorney, "not AT all. The time to fight the hardest is when you feel dead sure that you are going to win! I feel that way, and I am making such a contest as I never have made before."

Keep the name in mind, for before many weeks have passed we shall all be writing it "Congressman" Deitrick.

This need not be very much of a story about Deitrick, for the Democrats of his district are as united as Democrats appear to be this Fall all over Massachusetts, while the Progressive party has placed in nomination in the new Eighth about the ablest of all their Congressional candidates in Massachusetts.

This Bull Moose candidate is Henry C. Long, Boston lawyer and publicist, who, if he were not a modest man—if he dared to trot out all his decorations, and stand them up in a single line—could write his name Henry C. Long, M. S., M. S. D., LL. B., and A. A. A. S.

Mr. Long Running, Too.

Mr. Long has been a life-long student of commercial and transportation matters. He is the best known lecturer on these subjects in New England. He played a prominent part in forcing street railways to protect motormen, conductors and passengers by putting vestibules on street cars. He was active again in getting the Grand Trunk railway for Boston. He led the movement to establish a Board of Directors for the Port of Boston.

One can readily understand how a Bull Moose candidate for Congress, of Mr. Long's ability and with his splendid record, might make serious trouble in the Eighth Congress District, for both the Republican and the Democratic candidates, and the Democrats of the district can thank their lucky stars, this day, that their party candidate for Congress happens to be a man with a clean record—personal, professional and legislative—who happens also to be a born fighter.

For Fred Deitrick—judging from the record as it is written down in newspaper files—is that kind of contestant. His rival for the Democratic nomination was of the same degree of fitness. Perhaps the Republicans are satisfied, too. Be that as it may, Deitrick was born in New Brighton, Pa., April 9, 1875. He was twenty years old when he came to Cambridge and the Harvard Law School. He is unmarried. His widowed mother, a brother, and four sisters, are still residents of Pennsylvania, thirty miles west of Pittsburgh.

The Democratic candidate for Congress cast his first vote in Cambridge, however, and he has been a Cantabrigian ever since.

How it all came about is told by the young gentleman himself:

Decides On Harvard.

"I had made up my mind to go to a law school," he says, "and of course I wanted the best. I wrote everywhere for information. I talked with all the lawyers and college men I could meet. My collection of law school catalogues was probably the most complete in existence at that time.

"Finally, my choice was narrowed down between Yale and Harvard. I looked over both catalogues for the last time. I observed that a great many Yale College men came up from New Haven to Cambridge to study law. I saw that some Harvard men went down to the Yale Law School, but that the proportion was about ten to one in favor of Harvard.

"I decided that if the Harvard Law School was good enough for so large a proportion of Yale men, it was good enough for Deitrick of New Brighton. So I came."

"Yes; but how did you happen to stay?"

Deitrick smiles.

"Aha! So you married during your law school course."

The candidate for Congress smiles again. He has you.

"I am a bachelor," he says.

"I just fell in love with Cambridge," he explains, "and I couldn't leave. I never shall. I guess I'm a sticker."

Which the record demonstrates.

In 1908, when he was thirty-three, the Democrats out North Cambridge way picked him up for the first time and planted him in the Board of Aldermen.

In 1901—he was twenty-six now—he began running for the House, and he ran two or three times before he was elected; from a district, the old Fourth Middlesex, which everybody knew to be "solidly" Republican.

Finally he was elected, and so pleasing was his State House record to the people of that district that he served in the House of 1903, the House of 1904 and the House of 1905.

Has Progressive Record.

Studied even in the greater light of today, Deitrick's record on Beacon Hill is found to be not only clean but progressive. The achievement he feels the best about is that he originated and forced through the Legislature a bill for the establishment of a school and home for crippled children. You can see the institution today out in Canton. It represents an investment of about $500,000. It is one of the things the Commonwealth likes to show off before her sister States.

F. S. DEITRICK

Soon after this, Deitrick formed the habit of running for Congress. He got one good drubbing, came up smilingly two years later for a second walloping, and two years ago almost landed. This time is it coming off.

What you want to take notice of, right here, is that this confident young six-footer out at Cambridge has been running against a gentleman with an international reputation, the Honorable Samuel Walker McCall of Winchester.

"Sam" McCall used to be a name to conjure with, hereabouts and thereabouts. "Sam" McCall was once known as the "great independent." To have been up against "Sam" McCall, just once, would have been experience enough for the ordinary young Cambridge Democrat. But Deitrick, remembering, perhaps, his experience in that "solid Republican" Fourth Middlesex, kept right on coming up smiling.

Two years ago Congressman McCall wrote a piece for the papers, about tariffs, or in defence of "Uncle Joe" Cannon or something, and when the votes were counted, McCall was elected by 2,012, a mighty drop for a great leader who had been customarily going down to Washington with an excess of many thousands of votes.

Soon after this, Mr. McCall let it be known that he had about all of the lower branch of Congress that he cares for, and that he would not run again.

Tinkered with District.

Then the eRpublicans at the State House set to tinkering with the Eighth District. They took out the city of Somerville, formerly Republican by a couple of thousand, and the city of Woburn, Democratic in the last Congress fight by as many hundred. They gave Somerville over to Ernest W. Roberts of Chelsea, who gladly swapped for it the Democratic city of Lynn, and they tucked Woburn into the Butler Ames district, taking away from that district the larger Democratic city of Lawrence.

New to the Eighth District, this year, are the city of Melrose and the towns of Stoneham and Wakefield—formerly in the Roberts district—the town of Lexington, heretofore in the district still called "Tirrells," and Watertown, formerly a part of the John W. Weeks territory.

All this patching and mending has not dismayed Mr. Frederick S. Deitrick even a little bit. Its only apparent effect is to make him surer and more certain of victory. But, as was observed away back in chapter one, the surer and more certain you make Deitrick, the harder he fights.

Studying the Congressional vote of two years ago, in the three cities and seven towns of the new Eighth District—using the returns from the Deitrick-McCall contest, the Roberts-Creamer encounter, the Mitchell-Wilder affair and the Daley-Weeks controversy—and, of course, remembering that Henry C. Long, Progressive, is much more than a spectator or bystander, one finds ample reason for Deitrick's confidence To illustrate:

Studying the Figures.

	Democratic.	Republican.
Cambridge	6,683	5,031
Medford	1,172	1,869
Melrose	714	1,396
Arlington	610	873
Belmont	250	420
Lexington	310	475
Stoneham	521	674
Wakefield	925	901
Watertown	915	939
Winchester	289	892
Totals	12,389	13,470

Republican politicians throughout the State have been telling one another for some time that the Republicans on the 1912 re-distributing committee made a horrible mess of the job, that the Democratic statesmen on the committee "put it all over" them.

The Democratic leaders of Cambridge, Medford, Melrose and the seven towns of the district do not care to go into this at this time. They do say, however, that the present Republican nominee, former Senator Frederick W. Dallinger of Cambridge, is, of course, not to be mentioned as a vote-getter in the same breath with "Sam" McCall, John W. Weeks and Ernest Roberts. Hence, these Democratic leaders are disposed—every one of them—to agree with Brother Deitrick that, regardless of the figures for 1910, the new Eighth District is Democratic. And at the same time they are gratified to observe that the time when Fred Deitrick fights the hardest is when everything looks the surest. A rather commendable practice, if one should be asked for one's opinion about it.

Year in and year out, by and large, Congressman McCall has been getting a lot of Democratic votes out of Cambridge. "McCall" sounded sort of Democratic, after a wey of speaking, and "Sam" listened rather chummy and friendly-like, and the Winchester Congressman sure has had a way of answering letters promptly, and doing favors for father and mother and all the folks, and being a right good friend to have in Washington; and so old-fashioned Democrats got in the way of voting for him, year after year, and being proud of him, and looking upon him as a kind of Institution.

They're With Dietrick.

Many of these Democrats have been owning up to it, lately. This year they are going to be with Fred Deitrick, who has really grown up among them, and is one of them. They know all about him. They have seen him come along at the law, all the while walking straight, proud of his noble profession and so on, but not a bit above having a cheery word and a pleasant smile for old and young, rich and poor, saint and sinner.

And so they are going to send him to Congress, and by all the signs the NEW Eighth District is going to be a Democratic stronghold until the State House carpenters get to work upon it again, with saw and chisel, some time after the census of 1920.

Naturally enough, with everything looking so certain-like, Mr. Deitrick isn't firing any extra big guns at the Republican candidate, Former Senator Frederick W. Dallinger.

No, indeed-y!

Deitrick simply says that Dallinger is a splendid type of the reactionary or Stand-Patters; that he is a Taft Republican, for which variety of Republican the plain people of this country no longer have any use that one can think about at the present time; that Dallinger's record in the Massachusetts Legislature is not the record of a man whom Mr. Deitrick wuld send to Congress in 1912; that Mr. Dallinger is an attorney for the Boston Elevated Railway Company; that Mr. Dallinger as a Senator voted against the vestibules on the street cars—just for instance—and that Mr. Dallinger has been in close touch with Elevated lobbyists, and so on.

The time may come in the campaign, although election day is almost here, when Deitrick may feel compelled to wage a regular war on Dallinger, but just at present he isn't doing much more than travel around the district, talking to the people as above, and being told by everybody that the NEW Eighth will be found in the right column on the Tuesday following the first Monday of November.

And Henry C. Long and the other Progressives are plugging away, and treating Cambridge to a new rally every night, and all three of them have headquarters and transparaucies and house parties almost side by side in Central square—down in the theatre district—and if there is a city this side of the Mississippi River that is having more politics per minute than the city of Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex, teacher invites any boy or girl in the room this afternoon to come forward and point it out on the map.

Hall Caine's Masterly Novel "The Woman Thou Gavest Me"

This serial is the most talked of story of the season. It has to do with the rebellion of a young girl against the efforts of a reckless father to sacrifice her to social ambitions and blight her life, as he did her mother's.

Its absorbing plot and sustained interest equals and even exceeds "The Christian" or "The Eternal City" by the same author. You cannot afford to miss this great story.

WOMEN WAR ON JACK JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—A woman of mystery, who is said to possess the most important evidence yet obtained against Jack Johnson in the "white slave" investigation being conducted by the Federal Grand Jury, is to testify before the probers. She possesses the key on which the case against the negro pugilist turns, it is said.

The utmost secrecy shrouds this woman. Mrs. F. Cameron-Falconet, who started the movement against Johnson in an effort to save her daughter from becoming his wife, refuses to disclose her identity. Counsel refuse to give her name. The authorities refuse to say who she is. They declare, however, that she is the most important witness they have yet secured.

A gigantic movement by the women of the country was set on foot today. Women's Clubs all over the country will be urged to take vigorous action against Johnson "as a menace to the women, not only of the white, but his own race as well."

Women Launch Fight.

Mrs. Sarah Webb Helm, of No. 5494 Everett avenue, is the negro pugilist's new enemy, and her efforts promise to result in moves against Johnson by both the Chicago Women's Clubs and the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Today she held a conference with officers of the Chicago Women's Club, at which it was decided what action can be taken here. Just what form this action is to be Mrs. Helm has not given out, but she said that some drastic move was to be taken at once.

Mrs. Helm sent a communication to Mrs. Percy Pennypacker, head of the national organization, in which she called upon the officers of the Federation of Women's Clubs to investigate and take vigorous action against Johnson.

Mrs. Genevieve Grant of No. 4043 Grand Boulevard, has been served with a subpoena to appear before the Federal Grand Jury next Monday. Mrs. Grant is a sister of Mrs. Katherine Ostrander, who also is to be summoned to appear as a witness.

When Miss Cameron first came to Chicago she lived at the Ostrander home, and the two women are believed to know much of her life while here. Mrs. Grant has expressed a willingness to tell all she knows about the girl and her visitors during the period she stayed at the Ostrander home.

Hunt Missing Witnesses.

One of the difficulties that has arisen to make the investigation more difficult is the disappearance from the city of numerous important witnesses. Among these is said to be the officer of a brewing concern, who is credited with considerable knowledge of Johnson's movements and of his private affairs.

Booker T. Washington, who criticised Johnson severely in a speech at Detroit recently, opened the way for a retort from the champion, who calls attention to the fact that he never got in the wrong flat and was severely beaten for the mistake.

At Boston College this evening the class of 1913 will hold the annual "college night" and smoker, given by the seniors yearly to the underclassmen. President Thomas L. LIVE RATS, 5 CENTS, DEAD ONES BRING 2

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—Two cents each will be paid for dead rats by the city of Philadelphia, while live ones will command five cents. Director Neff of the Department of Health desires more rats to examine for evidences of bubonic plague. Live rats are more desirable because they possess fleas, believed to be the real carriers of the disease.

FITCHBURG, Oct. 24.—The "Cardiff Giant" will attempt to "come back."

This does not herald the appearance of a new "white hope" or a second Jeffries. It chronicles the latest exploit of the famous museum freak of thirty-five years ago.

The "Giant" has been sold by a deputy sheriff with an order from the court, to satisfy judgment against its owners for $803 due for storage during the last thirty-five years.

The court action was against Attorney Aubrey Z. Goodfellow and Attorney Thomas Hovey Gage, Jr., of Worcester, administrators of the estates of the former owners of the "giant," and Theodore W. Harnum of Wetherfield, Ct., who was the last person to claim ownership in the property. The purchaser was Ralph P. Lawrence, whose mother, Mrs. S. S. Lawrence, brought the suit. The price paid was $200.

Mr. Lawrence is now in communication with theatrical managers, and hopes to start the "giant" on the road again. It was unearthed at Cardiff, N. Y., in 1864.

A WOMAN'S BEAUTY

All Specialists Agree That It Cannot Be Obtained by the Use of Cosmetics.

Beauty—real beauty—is more than skin deep. No cosmetic in the world can give the wholesome color, the bright eyes, the clear transparent skin that is the natural result of pure blood, proper diet and hygienic habits of daily life.

It sounds easy and it is easy for a woman to have the beauty which health alone can give. A safe and efficient tonic if the blood is weak, thin or impure (Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are especially recommended), the avoidance of foods which will cause eruptions, and regular bathing of the skin. That is all and it is the only way. Most women will be interested in the following statement:

Mrs. Agnes Goodworth, of No. 88 Grace street, Mt. Washington, Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "I was in a run-down condition, which developed into anaemia and nervous prostration. For two or three years I was doctoring and was confined to bed for from four to six weeks every few months. I was pale and weak. I couldn't sleep and was so nervous and irritable that I could hardly stand it. I had no appetite and nothing that I ate agreed with me. I lost weight and became completely run down. The doctor said I didn't have enough blood and at last advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. In about a week I began to gain. They did wonders for me. I gained in flesh and strength, had a good color and was entirely cured. Later I gave them to my little boy who had no appetite and was sickly. He commenced to gain right away and is now strong and healthy. I can heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for people who are run down and have no blood. Women, especially, will be benefited by them. I gave them to my daughter and they built her up wonderfully. It is my duty to speak good words for a remedy which has done so much for my family."

Write to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Box 176, Schenectady, N. Y., for a free booklet, "Plain Talks to Women." It should be read by every woman and growing girl. A free sample of the new laxative "Pinklets" will also be sent you. Should you be unable to obtain Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in your locality they will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, fifty cents per box; six boxes for $2.50.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

By way of New York comes a rumor that Walter E. Flanders of the Flanders Motor Car Company has been offered the presidency and general managership of the United States Motors Company. It is said negotiations are practically completed to bring about this condition of affairs, and that the banking interests in control of the United States motors are behind the proposition.

The tentative plan adopted to pull United States Motors through is capitalization at $31,000,000, of which $11,000,000 is to be 7 per cent. first preferred cumulative stock, $9,000,000 second preferred 6 per cent. cumulative stock and $11,000,000 4 per cent. common stock.

In connection with the deal it is said that United States Motors will acquire the Flanders Motor Company, which is capitalized at $3,750,000, and will assume all obligations and debts of the latter concern, as well as pay a cash bonus to Flanders and his fellow stockholders. The plan also includes the manufacture at the United States Motors plants of the 12,000 six-cylinder Flanders cars contracted for by the latter concern's agents.

All the local racing men are decidedly keen as regards the running off of the motor races at Rockingham Park tomorrow afternoon. The fact that the several men are to race for honor and glory alone proves conclusively that motor drivers have more ideas of real sport than they are generally credited with possessing.

The competition will be fully as keen as though a $5,000 trophy was at stake. Harry Cobe said: "The fact that we are willing to go to Rockingham and race just for the sake of racing and to open the gates free of charge to the motorists and others interested in automobile speed must prove conclusively that the riders are confident of their particular mounts to finish in the front. I look for a very close and interesting race in the ten-mile event, as in my opinion, all the cars, including my own Jackson, are capable of traveling at a faster rate than the safety speed of the track will permit. It will be generalship that wins the race, and there will be racing of a high order, races that will be worth the traveling from Boston to Rockingham to witness."

The second annual automobile show of the Buick Motor Car Company, which is being conducted in the Massachusetts avenue salesroom of that company, has been decidedly successful, and Manager Johnson has every reason to feel perfectly satisfied with the results attained. He has this week sold no less than fifteen of the 1913 cars and hopes before the close of the show at 10 o'clock tomorrow evening to double that number of orders.

The display is a most attractive one, finely staged, and the different models show to great perfection and advantage in their very fine setting.

'Fooled 'Em All,' Says Girl Who Recovered From a Broken Neck

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Cecilia Wellstead, whose neck was broken in an automobile crash last August, when there were thirteen in the auto, has completely recovered.

"I've fooled 'em all," happily exclaimed little Miss Wellstead, at the St. Mary's Hospital at Jamaica, when her recovery was assured.

After the crash, when they picked Cecilia up, she could not stand. Her legs were helpless, her arms hung limp and her head lolled over. He rneck was broken, but she was alive. She was paralyzed.

The broken fragments of her backbone were removed and the girl immediately proceeded to recover.

The Cigar Industry of Boston

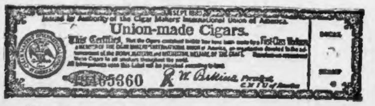
To the Public:

The development of the Cigar Industry of Boston was very well demonstrated in the Industrial Division of the Columbus Day Parade.

A cigar box of small dimension, not having the Union Label, with the inscription ''Cigar Industry 1882,'' mounted on another box of IMMENSE proportion BEARING THE UNION LABEL, with the inscription ''Cigar Industry 1912.''

In 1882 there were about 300 employed in our cigar factories; today we have over 3000, all of whom are spending their earnings for house rent, clothing, hats, shoes, wearing apparel and all necessaries of life.

This means that approximately three millions of dollars, earned annually by workers in the cigar industry, goes into the coffers of the Boston merchants and landlords. Do they in return consider when purchasing cigars whether they are helping the industry here, or whether they are being served with cigars made outside of Greater Boston or New England.



Issued by Authority of the Cigar Makers' International Union of America.

Union-made Cigars.

This Certifies

The Cigarmakers' Blue Label stands for equal pay for women and men, abolition of child labor, good living conditions, short hours and sanitary conditions for the workers and higher education for all.

$40,000 Total Prizes! Get Busy!

"I'LL BE NEAR THE TOP!"

Thomas J. Powers of South Boston.

Page of pictures of candidates will appear in next Sunday's American; look for your friends.

Thomas J. Powers trying to bring the big prize to South Boston and works actively.

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

In the hurry and bustle incident to the handling of the volume of subscriptions which candidates are turning in and which will give the Boston AMERICAN the proud title of "Over 500,000 Circulation," it is gratifying to know that the contestants in the $40,000 contest realize the opportunities which the competition presents.

In yesterday's mail came this letter:

To the Contest Editor of the Boston AMERICAN:

Permit me to pay a tribute to your glorious contest, and at the same time give you my unbiased opinion concerning the same.

I find, in comparing yours with any other newspaper contest I have ever heard of, that there is—well, no comparison.

Some people may say, Why not? In the first place, there is a greater number of prizes, both from a financial view and otherwise, thereby giving to each and every candidate who will half try a chance to win.

And listen, brothers and sisters, while I tell you that the $10,000 prize is big enough to make the laziest mortal that ever walked this earth sit up and take notice.

That one prize alone compels each candidate to work and work hard, and inspires them with a more zealous feeling than they might otherwise have, and so attain the greatest of all their desires—Ten Thousand Dollars.

Then again as a further incentive to work and not become laggard in their efforts to win, you wake them all up again after a bit, with that cry that awakens all but the dead—MONEY.

You tell them you will distribute One Thousand Five Hundred and Forty-five Dollars to the most worthy—to the 100 candidates polling the "largest" number of votes by subscription in the next few weeks.

Truly, yours is a most generous offer. And, best of all, there is no string attached, as only energy and brains will win out. To enter the contest is free. Did I say free? Yes, and now to PROVE it, too.

As a candidate, I am furnished with all printed matter to help me in my campaign. I can have postcards to send to all of my friends—and then some. I can get an order to have my picture taken, I can have a slide made advertising me as a candidate in this great contest which I can give to my moving picture friend, whose theatre I patronize, and ask him to throw it on the screen for me.

I can invade the sanctum of the Contest Editor any hour of the day and ask all the questions I can think of. All this is free; in fact, everything is free except the presses that print the AMERICAN, and I can't very well expect them.

It all serves to bring home to me the fact that the AMERICAN is constantly offering opportunities for its readers if they will but grasp them.

Many truths do we learn through the AMERICAN, not the least of which is that we can "get busy" and get $10,000 for our trouble.

E. STANLEY.
No. 231 Shawmut avenue, Boston.

A page of candidates' pictures and the big twenty-five-vote coupon will appear in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Thomas J. Powers of No. 189 West Fifth street, South Boston, is determined to bring the $10,000 to South Boston if his personal energy and that of his friends can accomplish this result.

Mr. Powers is making a strenuous campaign for subscriptions and coupons, and says: "My friends won't have to look very far down in the first vote list to find my name. It will be as near the top as constant hustle can possibly put it. Watch for my name among the leaders in the first vote list."

THE STATIONERS

The success of the Boston ambassadors was quite beyond their fondest hopes. They thought they might obtain the consent of Herr Ballin to visit Boston and inspect our harbor. Instead they were positively assured of the speedy establishment of a continental passenger service, the first Boston has had, a new Mediterranean service, and the addition at no remote date of the Amerika and Kaiserin August Victoria, two of the largest and finest ships in the world, to the Boston fleet.

Coming to Boston.

Herr Ballin and the whole Board of Directors of the Hamburg Line are coming to Boston next Wednesday and undoubtedly will be given a splendid reception.

The Boston AMERICAN is given full Bancroft for bringing about the conference which had such wonderful results.

The Boston AMERICAN was informed by the writer that Herr Ballin and his Board of Directors were at the Plaza considering the establishment of a Boston service, with other matters, and the AMERICAN immediately advocated the sending of an important delegation to New York to confer with Herr Ballin and show him that the city was in earnest.

Mayor Fitzgerald, Chairman Bancroft and the Boston Chamber of Commerce saw the importance of the situation and their visit turned the scale. Nobody in the delegation doubted that the coming of the deputation secured from Herr Ballin more important concessions than he had intended to give.

The famous steamship manager was evidently delighted at the attitude of Boston towards this line. His manner was extremely cordial, and he declared that a city which was an enterprising as Boston should certainly be worthy of the most serious attention from his steamship company.

A most significant feature of the interview was his demand to know how long a lease the Hamburg Line could secure of the Commonwealth Dock.

"Others will follow us to Boston, there is no doubt of that," declared Herr Ballin. "We do not want to be crowded out at some future time."

Assured of Long Lease.

He was informed that a long lease could be arranged and his anxiety was taken as an assurance that the Hamburg Line is not making an excursion here, but intends establishing a permanent service.

The Boston party met at the Hotel Belmont at 6 p. m., and proceeded to the Plaza shortly afterwards. The Chamber of Commerce was represented by Elwyn G. Preston and E. E. Blodgett. Mayor Fitzgerald represented the city and General Bancroft the State and Port Directors.

Herr Ballin with Directors Polls and Holderman received the visitors with great cordiality. Chairs were drawn and a conference began which lasted an hour.

"The Hamburg-American line," said Herr Ballin, "has taken a great interest in the port of Boston and its development recently. We have come to the conclusion that so great and so enterprising a city should be connected with Hamburg by a passenger service, and we are ready, if you can provide us with a dock and proper facilities, to give you a fortnightly passenger service, commencing early in May. Can you have a pier ready for us at that time?"

"We can," replied General Bancroft. "We have a pier 1,200 feet long by 400 feet wide. It has a depth of 35 feet of water at low tide. We shall erect upon it a passenger shed suitable for any steamship line.

"And what is the distance of this pier from the city?"

"It is very accessible. By taxicab from the South terminal station it is barely five minutes. By carriage it is less than fifteen.

"And how about dredging?"

"We shall do all necessary dredging to assure your ships a safe and easy approach. There is very little necessary as a matter of fact.

Need Big Drydock.

"Another thing," said Herr Ballin, "there are nine ships afloat or building which are too big to enter any drydock on this side of the Atlantic. The three vessels of the Imperator class, the Olympic, the Mauretania and Lusitania, and many others, are too big for drydocks over here."

"We have an appropriation of $9,000,000 for the improvement of the port of Boston, and it is our opinion that a great drydock is necessary to us. It is very probable that we shall build a drydock capable of caring for any ship now building or likely to be built for a long time.

"I do not mind admitting that such a drydock would make us think very highly of Boston." said Herr Ballin.

"Am I right in believing that Boston has fine hotels?" asked the German.

"Boston has many fine hotels," replied Mayor Fitzgerald. "The Copley-Plaza is declared by many to be the finest in the world. We have fifty comfortable hotels in Boston and are likely to have many more in the near future.

"Speaking as Mayor of Boston I want to say that the city will do everything in its power to assist the Hamburg line in maintaining a successful service. I need not tell you that we are geographically better located for a great passenger port than New York, and express steamships might well make Boston their terminal."

The Mayor went on to explain how a passenger leaving Europe could reach New York five hours earlier by landing in Boston instead of New York, and how a person bound to Chicago could save ten hours.

He pointed out that the steamship voyage being shortened by ten hours by coming to Boston instead of New York, there would be ten hours' consumption of coal and food saved, a very important item running into four figures each voyage.

Then Herr Ballin, surprised and delighted the gathering:

"We are building three ships of the Imperator class," he said. "When they are in service we shall not need the Amerika so much. Now, what would you say if we sent the Amerika to Boston? I mean it. We are willing to do so."

As the Amerika is the most fashionable boat crossing the Atlantic today, with a minimum rate of $127, the feelings of the Boston delegation can be imagined.

"Will you do this?" asked Mayor Fitzgerald.

"Yes. That is why we come to Boston, not to give you old, worn-out ships, but fine ones. If people will not travel in fine boats they won't patronize old ones. Isn't that so?

"Furthermore, the Kaiserin August Victoria will be released next year. She is our largest boat at present. I think by 1915 she will be added to the Boston service provided all goes well.

The Bostonians applauded.

"Next Winter," said Herr Ballin, smiling, "We shall have to take off the Cleveland and Cincinnati because cruises have been arranged for them, but we shall commence a Mediterranean service with boats that I am sure you will like, Boston has always been a good port for Mediterranean business.

"After next Winter we shall operate the Hamburg service all the year round."

Bostonians Jubilant.

Herr Ballin then mentioned details that will be settled in Boston next week, such as rent of pier, switching charges, railroad facilities, etc.

He received assurances from both the Mayor and the chairman of the port directors that these details would be settled to his satisfaction, provided he kept his word. The parley then broke up with handshakes all around. Outside the Bostonians were jubilant.

"We never dreamed that we could secure such splendid things by this visit," said Chairman Bancroft. "All we expected to do was to receive Herr Ballin's consent to inspect Boston Harbor."

"Exactly what does the Hamburg proposition mean?"

"It means this. We have had $9,000,000 at our disposal for two years and we have not touched it, because we were waiting until it could be expended to best advantage.

"Now we must begin to build at once upon Commonwealth Pier. It means hustle all the time to have the passenger dock ready by May. We shall build a double deck pier as has been planned and we shall make it the finest steamship pier in the United States if not in the world. We want it as an advertisement for the port.

"We need a drydock, and need it badly. We have the opportunity of possessing the only drydock in America capable of caring for the largest steamers.

WHAT HAMBURG LINE PROPOSES TO DO FOR BOSTON

The Hamburg line will put into operation the Cleveland and Cincinnati, 16,500-ton ships.

In November the company will establish a Boston-Mediterranean service, and in 1914 the steamer Amerika, 22,500 tons, the most popular ship of all the Hamburg fleet at present, is to be placed in the Boston service.

The following year the Kaiserin August Victoria, 25-000 tons, and the largest ship of the line at present, will come to Boston.

WOMEN'S SUITS AT $15.00

Made of genuine Lymansville cheviot—black or navy—lined with Skinner's guaranteed satin. But, above all else observe the tailoring. Study it in detail. The excellence of the finish is the pre-eminent feature of these Suits. Workmanship that establishes a new standard at the price. Will you be good enough to put your time against ours and let us show these Suits to you?

WOMEN'S SUITS AT $25.00

Suits made of serge, cheviot, broadcloth, eponge, corduroy, mixtures and Bedford cord—plainly tailored and trimmed models.

Disinterested women who know the local market volunteer the information that our variety of Suits at $25.00 equals any competing collection, and they add that our values are far and away above all others. Their statements confirm our own convictions.

WOMEN'S DRESSES AT $12.75

Dresses, made of serge—black, navy and Copenhagen—finished with lace collar; silk-edged frill and cuffs; peplum back; patent leather belt.

After examining one of these Dresses—and ignorant of our price—you'd guess it to be a $16.50 Dress. And you'd not be far out of the way.

Others—$5.95 to $25.00—relatively as attractive.

$10.00 SKIRTS AT $5.95

Women's Skirts, made of black or navy serge, tan or gray mixtures, also a few made of voile or melrose cloth. Panel-back model, finished with clusters of side pleats. The quantity is not large—but there are plenty for a brisk Saturday business.

WOMEN'S COATS AT $15.00

We've made $15.00 a popular price for Women's Coats. At the time of writing we have twenty unusually smart styles for you to choose from. They are revelations—so nobby, jaunty and just right—that women who have formerly bought $20.00 and $25.00 Coats are now taking the ones at $15.00. Made of heather mixtures, boucles, zibelines, diagonal cheviots, chinchilla and rich Scotch melanges.

$15.00 RAINCOATS AT $7.95

Double texture taffeta silk—ideal Raincoats—loose model—high storm collar—wind straps on sleeves. They have the charm of lightness—do not oppress nor enervate—but they do protect. Many women prefer them to the heavier, bulkier, more unwieldy kind.

WOMEN'S KIMONOS—Made of crepe or fleece cloth, long model, empire effect, shirred waist, trimmed with messaline silk, long or short sleeves; values up to $3.75; choice $1.45

WOMEN'S BATHROBES—Made of blankets or warmthful ripple eiderdown, square neck, others with collar—trimmed with fine messaline silk. Fresh, new goods; special at $3.75

THE GLOVE STORE

It is not the Glove Store that attracts so many women here. The store—as a store—is utterly inadequate. Not room enough. That's not all. It is hidden away—comparatively obscure and out of the beaten line of travel.

But the Gloves, the Gloves—they are great. When we move them—giving them the size space and location their importance demands—we cannot promise to improve the Gloves.

We'll expand and beautify the department, but values will be no greater than now—can't be.

Charles H. Marston:

Charles H. Marston of the Industrial Development Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, said:

The decision of the Hamburg-American line to come to Boston, I consider, is the biggest thing that Boston has ever secured.

> WHAT BOSTON IS TO DO FOR THE NEW STEAMSHIP LINE
> Boston will start the construction of a great passenger pier on the Commonwealth Dock, South Boston.
>
> Boston will construct a drydock, which will be capable of containing the largest ship afloat, or that is likely to be afloat for many years.
> Boston's port directors will seek immediately authority from the Governor's Council to expend a large proportion of the $9,000,000 voted by the State in making these improvements.

We were exceptionally fortunate to secure this great transatlantic steamship line with the facilities which we now have. Of course, when we get the port improved more, we shall try to get other lines, and I feel sure that in this we will be successful. I am delighted that this line is to come to Boston, as I am sure every other business man in Boston and every other public citizen ought to be.

Clarence S. Tutweiler.

Clarence S. Tutweiler of the Industrial Development Committee of the Chamber of Commerce said:

It is a great thing for Boston. It is just what we need. We haven't spread ourselves. We could do as much as New York if we had as much ginger. We are just as near the West and we are twenty-four hours nearer Europe. We have a great advantage over New York that way. The coming of the Hamburg-American line ought to be a great thing for Boston, but it is just a beginning. Greater things will come later. People are just beginning to wake up. It is a shame that they have to go to New York to sail to a great many places. We should have lines running from Boston. We have to go to New York to sail for Jamaica. I know a lot of people who have just gone to New York to sail for Jamaica when they ought to be able to take a steamer from Boston.

William M. Flanders.

William M. Flanders, member Trade Extension Committee, Chamber of Commerce, said:

The coming of the Hamburg-American Line to this port would be one of the biggest and best things that ever happened in the commercial life of this city. The Board of Port Directors and the Chamber of Commerce deserve great credit for their efforts to bring about this move. We should all get out and do everything possible to bring it about, and show the Germans as well as others that we are alive.

Preston Bond.

Preston Bond of the Industrial Development Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, said:

The coming of the Hamburg-American Line will be of lasting benefit, not only to Boston but to entire New England. It is certainly a big step in advance, and is one of the greatest steps of the decade. It means more than anyone can comprehend. Other lines will be obliged to run into Boston as a result of the coming of the Hamburg-American line in order to compete and keep up their business, I think. The coming of the line will have a far-reaching effect on all New England.

Colonel G. B. Billins.

Colonel George B. Billings, immigration commissioner, said:

The port of Boston will be greatly benefitted by the accession of the ships promised by Herr Ballin of the Hamburg-American line, and we are to be congratulated. The Cleveland and the Cincinnati will be great additions to the fleet of passenger ships now coming to Boston. These ships carry about 300 cabin passengers and from 1,500 to 1,800 steerage, and if they only came here during the Summer it would mean an increase of immigration to this port of 12,000 to 15,000 annually, or from 25 to 30 per cent.

Walter M. Lowney.

Walter M. Lowney, chairman of the committee on trade extension, Chamber of Commerce, said:

The coming of the Hamburg-American line certainly marks a new era in the prosperity of the port of Boston and Massachusets as well. But in order to secure any benefits from this line and from the others which will surely follow, the people must take advantage of their opportunity. One of the first and most imprtant things to be done in my estimation is to build a huge drydock which would accommodate any ship in the world.

We have one of the finest harbors in the world, but we must give the steamship companies what they want and need in order to bring them here and hold them.

Call on Steamship Men in New York Unexpectedly Successful.

Everyone should get out and work fr this line and all of the others. We need them and we can get them if we go after them in the right way.

Louis C. Southard.

Louis C. Southard, member of Chamber of Commerce Committee on Foreign Trade, said:

The coming of the Hamburg-American line is a forerunner of what is to come in the way of improvements to this port in the near future. It is almost impossible to estimate the benefits which will be derived through this move.

The people here are just waking up to the facilities of their port and what is needed. They must fight from now on to secure other lines and to see that the railroads carry out their promises regarding improvements for handling freight and passengers from steamships.

When the Commonwealth pier is completed, we shall have better facilities than the port of New York for handling passengers and freight, and when other improvements proposed by the Board of Port Directors are completed, no other port in the world will have the advantages which we shall enjoy. Steamship officials will be quick to realize these facts if they are called to their attention in the proper manner. It is certainly an excellent thing for the port, and I wish to congratulate every one who has worked toward this end.

TO GOVERNOR FOSS

My Dear Governor:

Why not do one great big, brave, honest thing to celebrate the finish of your second term in office?

The people of the State, tired, sick, and disgusted with the blatherskite political bosses, who for over a quarter of a century had been doing their thinking for them and then compelling them to bow to their thus thought-out-for-them line of action, determined in 1910 to have a head in their own thinking.

They elected you.

You painted enchanting pictures of the to-be conditions if they elected you to be chief executive of the State—reciprocity, increased wages, lower-cost living, and one lurid, jolly millennium of contented happiness which in a brief six months after your inauguration would cause the people of all other States to flock to our dear old Commonwealth; a boom in abandoned farms and milltown tenements, and a panic among dealers in almshouse supplies.

Alas for those stillborn dreams of mortals! You have served two terms and the only booms are those in Elevated strikes and Lawrence dynamitings and in East Boston and New Haven stock, and the only panics those in the homes of the honest and struggling masses of the State in their rush to secure suicide-vantage-points on the wharves and at the tube-ends of asphyxiation plants.

Of course, these booms and panics were not of your making, for, like those poor devil citizens of our State who swallowed your reciprocity, low-cost living and prosperity promises without mastication, you are but mortal and subject to the laws of Nature.

My dear Governor, may I, a humble citizen of our own Bay State, one whom you were kind enough to assure, after your first election, had been largely instrumental in securing your majority, suggest to you that the principal accomplishment of those to-be-glorious two years of your reign was a jump in the volume of "you're a liar, you're another, you're a thief, and so are you" style of legislation, and the dumping of the time-honored reputation of the State for decent, dignified and intelligent public discussion into the Jack Johnson oratorical arena.

And, by the way, my dear Governor, do you know that at the recent International Convention of Long-Haired Reformers, the American blue ribbon for Public Blatherskiting was pinned on Massachusetts? I suppose you have been so busy campaigning that you did not know of the vote.

Travellers returning from the West, South and Europe say that the orderly-minded Massachusetts citizens whom they have met are at great pains to assure strangers that they do not dwell within the confines of the State formerly noted throughout the world as the home of the Websters, Sumners, Hoars, Whittiers, Emersons, Lowells, Channings and other respecters and devotees of "English as she is spoke" in fork, finger-bowl and napkin society.

I repeat, notwithstanding your personal accomplishments during your reign as Governor, why not wind it up with something big and worth-while, something that will go a long way towards making the world forget the nasty way in which our great State has been heel-dragged through the slums and sewers of blithering billingsgate?

With your able, matter-of-fact brain and hard-headed experience in things practical, you know there is only one result of the coming election which is of any real import to the people of the State—I mean to the very large majority of all the people, the decent-minded, clean-bodied, manly-and-womanly-souled people—and that is the election of a United States Senator to serve the State the coming six years.

All the other results are settled—Wilson's overwhelming election, your own election by a squeak, a Republican Legislature, and the superbly sentimental victory for Woman's Suffrage. That all these things are settled, you know probably as well as I do, and you also know that the result of none of them will have any more effect on retarding the present rapidly-increasing and now almost prohibitive high-cost living of the people, or the staying of that black, gaunt revolution which is forming out there, than the tissue-paper blanketing of Hell would have in stifling its ever-expanding flames and fumes.

You must know that if Massachusetts should rise right now from the centre of that ocean of hypocritical cant which is inundating the country, and pass a primary law allowing the people of the State themselves to select the new United States Senator, that one act will have a greater effect on staying coming disaster than all else, particularly if the selected Senator should be one who will rush to Washington with the message: "The old Commonwealth of Massachusetts demands that all the buncombe questions that have been before Congress for the past quarter of a century be put aside until a law has been passed which will actually smash high-cost living."

Now, my dear Governor, what do you say? The people of the State are listening for your answer, for the people of the State want to do this job themselves. Will you let them? Will you let them say whether they want that able, agile patriot of the people, the man who put Biggest, Busiest, Bulliest Boston on the world's map, and spiked it there, the Honorable John Frankenstein Fitzgerald; or whether they want that foremost among American statesmen, the Honorable Samuel Walker McCall; or whether they prefer that honest, old-fashioned, business doer, Charles Successful Bird, or whether, perchance, they prefer someone of that bunch of professional pols. who for the past two decades have turkey-trotted and bunny-hugged the municipal, State and national public cribs.

In the opinion of your real friends, the one act of calling a special session of the Legislature now, today, before election, will do more to place your daguerreotype in Faneuil Hall than all the other acts of your career.

Believe me,
Yours very truly,

THOMAS W. LAWSON

$110,000,000 MERGER OF SHAWMUT AND ELIOT BANKS NOW IN EFFECT

The merger of the Eliot National Bank with the National Shawmut Bank became a fact today when with the opening of business customers of the Eliot bank transacted their business at the Shawmut banking offices. All officers and clerks of the Eliot bank took up their offices at the Shawmut bank, and Eliot bank checks were cashed at the Shawmut.

President William A. Gaston of the Shawmut, which now becomes a $110,000,000 institution, one of the nation's three largest banks, was enthusiastic over the consolidation today, declaring that the new, growing, booming Boston deserves by right great banking houses capable of swinging big businesses. Speaking of the consolidation, President Gaston today said:

President Gaston's Statement.

I believe that anything that will enable Boston business to get its share of the present growth of trade and commerce is a good thing for Boston. It requires, however, constantly larger sums to finance the requirements of modern commerce. Boston to successfully compete with other cities for its share must have aggregations of capital in proportion. The Shawmut bank compares favorably in size and assets to any bank in the United States. The present addition to its business, of course, still further improves its position.

Competition among financial institutions has resulted in a rivalry which affects earning power, especially affecting the smaller institutions. A glance at the returns of the Comptroller of the Currency will show a wide difference in proportionate amounts earned by the large and small banks. I believe that poor earnings of some of the smaller institutions are due to the modern method of offering any inducement to a possible depositor, regardless of the character of his account or its benefit to the institution. The fact that a bank ought to add to its surplus annually a fair amount as protection to its stockholders is often overlooked. I believe, however, that this is a temporary matter and will probably be rectified in the near future.

Eliot Directors Represented.

Some of the directors of the Eliot will be invited to the board of the Shawmut.

The deposits of the Shawmut at the close of business Wednesday were $87,887,210 so that the addition of the Eliot deposits will give the Shawmut nearly $98,000,000 deposits. The resources of the Shawmut will bulk well over $110,000,000. It is interesting to note that under the presidency of Harry L. Burrage the assets of the Eliot have grown from approximately $5,000,000 in 1899 to approximately $15,000,000 at present.

The absorption of the Eliot by the Shawmut marks the sixteenth distinct amalgamation for the latter institution, its original formation in 1898 occurring through the consolidation of ten national banks.

Burrage Vice-President.

Under the proposed terms of the consolidation of the Eliot with the Shawmut, stockholders of the Eliot will receive $40 a share for "good-will" or premium above the book value. As the book value of the Eliot is in the neighborhood of $240 a share the Shawmut offer is virtually equivalent to $280 a share purchase price, the entire deal involving the payment of about $2,800,000 by the Shawmut.

The number of clearing-house banks in the city will be reduced to fourteen and the total number of banks to twenty. It was only thirty-one years that there were sixty-two national banks in Boston.

The leading interest in the Eliot National has been President Burrage, who controlled nearly 24 per cent. of the 10,000 shares. Edwin H. Abbot had 1210 and F. W. Estabrook 1250. Officers and directors of the Eliot are:

President, Harry L. Burrage; vice-president, Gerard Comly; cashier, William J. Mandell; directors, Joseph H. White, Charles F. Ayer, Henry B. Sprague, David N. Skillings, Gerard Comly, Harrry L. Burrage, F. Lothrop Ames, James H. Proctor, Leverett S. Tuckerman, Edwin Hale Abbot, Edwin F. Atkins and F. W. Estabrook.

As of Septemeber 4 capital stock was $1,000,000; surplus and undivided profits $1,384,139.

Can Demand Things Now.

President Gaston's outline of what this consolidation means to Boston, only hints of what can be accomplished for the upbuild of the city by having it become operative.

"With a bank of this magnitude in our midst, we now can go out and demand things," was the way still another of the bank officials put it. "Instead of begging the great ocean-to-ocean transportation companies to send their ships to this port, we can and will get what belongs to us as a right. And this because we have a banking institution capable of accommodating the biggest of businesses, however great their magnitude."

Business men declared today that this consolidation was inevitable, that it had to come, with the tremendous growth of modern industry. To make of Boston a city of the first class, they contended, it was necessary that she should have a first-class bank, as measured by modern standards.

This unofficial explanation of the advantages sure to accrue to Boston through the consolidation is said to be the inside reasons for it being made.

MAYOR URGES CITIZENS TO PUT MONEY INTO PORT DEVELOPMENT

SAYS IT IS TIME WEALTHY TURNED ATTENTION FROM WEST TO BOSTON.

Regarding the promise of the Hamburg-American line to come to Boston and the development of the port, Mayor Fitzgerald issued today the following statement:

Our trip to New York was very successful. We found Herr Ballin and his fellow-directors of the Hamburg-American line very friendly disposed toward Boston. Next Wednesday, when they come here, I think the business men of Boston will be very much pleased with the point of view which the Hamburg-American line has on Boston's future.

The assurance that Herr Ballin gave us, that other lines would follow his own, was most gratifying and confirms the opinion that some of us have had for some years back—that even if we get nothing but the business which New York cannot handle, it will immensely increase Boston's commerce. All the big steamship lines are beginning to appreciate Boston's advantages, and if we get our port into condition there is no limit to the increase that will come to our business in the next ten years. Judging from the growth of passenger traffic with Europe in the past ten years, millions will be required to meet the demand in the next decade.

Urges Citizens to Aact.

I hope that the effort of the Hamburg-American line in promoting Boston's commercial interests will be supplemented by an effort on the part of Boston's own citizens, particularly the financial interests, to take advantage of the opportunity now offered us in the business about to develop through the Panama Canal. This canal is being built at a cost of $400,000,000 and it means a tremendous increase in the sea trade between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, as well as with South American ports.

There is a responsibility resting upon those communities bordering upon the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans to furnish the equipment to take care of this business. Next to New York, Boston is the biggest seaport of the Atlantic coast. In addition to this, we are a manufacturing community. We need the raw material of the Pacific coast and the Gulf of Mexico, and the Southern part of the Atlantic coast, and we can return manufactured products of New England. Tremendous opportunities await those communities that will get busy.

Opportunity for Boston.

I read only the other day that the American Hawaiian Steamship Company, which carries a large commerce from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic coast, using the Tehauntepec Railway, does not intend to decrease its rates, taking the ground that there will be no opposition in steamship lines. It would be very scant appreciation of the liberality of the United States government in spending $400,000,000 for this great canal if communities like Boston did not rise to their opportunity and build steamship lines which will give us the advantage of a cheaper water communication through the Panama Canal.

I intend writing a letter to the banking interests of this city calling their attention to what I consider their duty at the present time, and I ask all public spirited citizens of Boston to join me in this effort to build up the commercial interests of the port.

"Put Money Into Boston."

One thing about which Herr Ballin was eager to learn was the hotel accommodations in Boston, and I took a great deal of pleasure in telling him of the new Copley Plaza Hotel. Of course I did not tell him that the Copley-Plaza was financed and is being run by New York interests. The Cape Cod Canal, which ought to be a Massachusetts enterprise, is being built by New York money.

It seems to me, therefore, that, inasmuch as outside capital has taken so much interest in our development, it is time for Boston's bankers, particularly the scions of wealth and aristocracy, who take a great deal of pride in the achievement of their ancestors, to show what they can do.

Up to the present time their principal achievement has been in the development of the West. There are exceptions, but rarely can they be found engaged in enterprises that mean something to this city. I say to them, therefore, "Get busy! Cease to talk about ancestors, and enroll your name on the scroll of honor of those who do things for Boston."

Letter to Hamburg.

Mayor Fitzgerald has sent the following letter to Hamburg:

To the Burgomeister and Handelskammer of Hamburg, Germany

Gentlemen:

General Albert Ballin, managing director of the Hamburg-American Line has just announced that the steamers Cleveland and Cincinnati of that line will begin fortnightly passenger trips between Hamburg, Southampton, Cherbourg and Boston next May. Later it is expected that the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria and the Amerika will be added to the Boston fleet and service to the Mediterranean is probable. This is the first direct connection between Boston and the continent.

Our city already owes Hamburg a debt of gratitude for the [illegible] freely given by its distinguished engineer, Baurat Wendemuth on the development of this port. This creation of a new steamship line doubles our obligations and I am glad to transmit the felicitations of citizens of the fifth city of the United States and the nearest to Europe to the second city of Germany upon this occasion.

There is no influence which tends more to unite the nations of the earth in bonds of amity, to spread enlightenment and preserve peace than commerce. May a better understanding grow between the people of Hamburg and of Boston through the new line that will be formed as a result of this more direct means of communication.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) JOHN F. FITZGERALD,
Mayor.

New Haven to Aid.

Timothy E. Byrnes, vice-president of the New Haven railroad, when asked today what the New Haven would do to arrange the freight rates so that the port of Boston could compete on an equal basis with other ports for transatlantic freight when the regular service of the Hamburg-American Line is established said:

The New Haven will do everything possible for the benefit of the port of Boston and to aid in bringing every possible pound of freight through this port.

The freight rates are ultimately adjusted in Washington by the Interstate Commerce Commission, so that if the rates at any time are not satisfactory to shippers they can take their case before that board.

I think that it is a splendid move for all sides for the Hamburg-American line to establish a regular service to this port and it cannot result other than to the immense benefit of Boston and New England.

BANCROFT TELEGRAPHS AMERICAN NEWS OF BOSTON'S BIG VICTORY

The telegram of Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the Port Directors, to the AMERICAN, telling of the victory won for the port of Boston by bringing the passenger service of the Hamburg-American Line here, is as follows:

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

The Hamburg-American line will institute a fortnightly passenger service between Hamburg, Southampton, Cherbourg and Boston next May with the steamers Cleveland and Cincinnati, of 16,000 tons each. Herr Ballin declares the Amerika will be added in 1914 and the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria in 1915. . . . A Mediterranean service is also probable.

Some of the other things that she did to him were:

AN UNNECESSARY TRAGEDY

"He took cold, developed pneumonia and died." Too often is an unnecessary tragedy told in these few words.

Had he taken for the cold a pure food medicine to strengthen the body and drive out the impurities, pneumonia would not have developed.

Unfortunately, he either took no medicine at all or added to the poison in his system by taking the drug-laden patent medicines, so-called "cough syrups" and "balsams."

Father John's Medicine cures a cold and builds up the body without poisonous drugs, not a patent medicine.

COLUMBUS STATUE MADE "M'KINLEY" FOR CHICAGO PARK

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—It was discovered today that a statue of Christopher Columbus, which was one of the features of the World's Fair, has been for some time standing in one of the city parks marked "William McKinley," and admired as representing the late President. The death of the sculptor, Frederick Beer, in [illegible] led to a search for his works in Chicago. The "Columbus" of the World's Fair was one. It was traced from place to place and was found at length in McKinley Park. The hair had been chiseled partly away and the [illegible] altered by another sculptor and the name "McKinley" placed on the pedestal.

ADA GIACCHETTI, WHO IS ACCUSED BY ENRICO CARUSO

MILAN, Italy, Oct. 25.—Signor Enrico Caruso takes the stand this afternoon to testify in the now internationally famous suit [illegible] charges a conspiracy by four persons, of whom Mme. Ada Giacchetti, his former common law wife, is one.

At yesterday's session two defendants were absent, Mme. Giacchetti, who is still living in Buenos Ayres, and Gaetano [illegible], who is still to be in New York. The defendants' lawyers' plea for a new postponement was strongly opposed by [illegible] and the court decided in favor of the latter.

Caruso, faultlessly dressed in black and [illegible], appeared in court, having arrived from Hamburg, [illegible] He was the center of interest [illegible] session. After the new [illegible] was rejected the reading [illegible] of Mme. Giacchetti's [illegible] telling her experience with Caruso, the cruel treatment and neglect to which she was subjected and denying the charge involving the chauffeur. It also made grave charges against the tenor's character. Throughout the reading Caruso kept his handkerchief over his face, occasionally brushing away his tears.

Woman Asked Forgiveness.

Two letters from Mme. Giacchetti to Caruso of earlier date were afterward introduced to disprove the contents of the brief. In the letters Mme. Giacchetti acknowledged the present of jewels, asked forgiveness for her conduct with Romati and [illegible] asked the tenor for a [illegible]

[illegible] was [illegible] today. There are [illegible] other witnesses, mostly [illegible]

The trial is the outcome of a [illegible] [illegible] two years ago by Mme. Giacchetti, who is Caruso's common law wife, in which she charged the tenor with theft of letters addressed to her containing a contract to sing in New York. According to her, [illegible] Caruso turned her [illegible] Mme. [illegible] de [illegible] [illegible] that afterward [illegible] [illegible] in New York [illegible] in the [illegible] of his secretary, Gaetano Loria [illegible]

[illegible] Mme. Giacchetti also charged the tenor with the theft of all her jewels in order to punish her for having run away with her chauffeur, Cesare Romati. Caruso [illegible] the charge and started a counter-action for calumny and defamation.

Defamation Charge Upheld.

A long and thorough investigation followed on the part of the judicial authorities of Milan, in the course of which it was ascertained that Caruso and Mme. Carlenta were not guilty of the charge preferred against them. At the same time the charge for calumny against Mme. Giacchetti and Loria was dropped, but the defamation charge [illegible] to the jewel theft against Mme. Giacchetti was sustained.

In the [illegible] Caruso was informed that a [illegible] was [illegible] once more extort money from him and that it had been [illegible] by [illegible] and Romati [illegible] Consequently he prepared new charges against them all and backed them with such proofs as to compel the judicial authorities of Milan to reopen the investigation.

Among the witnesses are Signor Gatti-Casazza, the Metropolitan director, William [illegible] and others. 'Parents' Work Aids Child Co-operate With Teachers

Mrs. Beatley Describes How New Organizations Solve Problems of Child Training.

By SYBIL WARNE.

Dr. Franklin Dyer, superintendent of Boston public schools, wants parents to come closer to the teacher in the public school.

He thinks a mutual understanding will be established by this.

"Parents should meet with teachers regularly," he says. "They should discuss the school their child attends, and attend it themselves occasionally. We want more of the social element in our schools—more of the sort of thing that is already established in Boston through the Parents' Association of the public schools, the Fathers and Mothers' Clubs and the School and Home Association."

These are the three organizations in Boston that are to see more parents attending this meeting and has already made thirty addresses in Boston in behalf of [illegible] interest between parent and teacher. "Both should come together [illegible] socially in a social way, should exchange their thoughts with one another and promote that co-operation which will [illegible] the general work of the public schools of Boston," he says.

Mrs. Bancroft Aids Dyer.

Many are co-operating with Dr. Dyer in this effort. Among them is Mrs. Clara Bancroft, chairman of the Committee on Moral Education. She believes that Dr. Dyer, by pursuing this, is going to do a great work for Boston schools and ge[illegible] for community of the parents.

Dr. Dyer held one of the first of these conferences or school centres recently with the parents and teachers of [illegible] district. Some most interesting topics were brought forth by the parents at this meeting of parents and teachers and good results will come from it.

Dr. Dyer wants the parents to understand the schools and what they are trying to do. Everyone who heard his plea for larger co-operation was moved and the plan was launched with great success.

What Associations Do.

Moving pictures on educational subjects were shown.

A few of the statements made at the parents' meeting were:

Parents' Associations in the public

MRS. CLARA B. BEATLEY

CLARA BANCROFT BEATLEY

They teach boys and girls not to play vulgar kissing games.

They discuss what books should be read.

They discuss what plays should be seen.

They try to find out why 'Johnnie' is always complaining about his teacher and what the teacher has to say about Johnnie from her point of view.

Mrs. Beatley an Authority.

Mrs. Clara B. Beatley, chairman of the Committee on Moral Education, and one who was largely instrumental in establishing these gatherings between parents and teachers, has given much time and thought to the subject and is considered an authority.

Boston was the first city to take any [illegible] and continued at least in the [illegible] of mutual understanding between parent and teacher.

[illegible] parents and teacher close to [illegible] to have regular conferences one with the other.

[illegible] all [illegible] these meetings of [illegible] with [illegible] what [illegible]

[illegible] have [illegible] Often a [illegible] certain things [illegible] which will give the impression that [illegible] teacher is discriminating against [illegible] the mother is angry, but when the subject is threshed over by the parent and teacher together they begin to understand one another.

Parents and teachers talk over what books should be read by the growing boy and girl. Often Miss Jordan of the Public Library [illegible] and gives invaluable advice [illegible].

Kissing games are discussed, with the advice that they are vulgar and should not be encouraged. Of [illegible] there is no harm to boys and girls playing such games. But when [illegible] enlightened they frown upon [illegible] games.

"Sometimes a nurse is present at these meetings and explains how to care for a child in the first beginnings of sickness.

"They [illegible] discussed the question of what are the good plays today? and what kind of moving pictures should the average child see? Certainly not the ones that are [illegible] with love ventures or are full of shooting Indians [illegible] plains.

"Young minds are very susceptible. They should be encouraged to see other things which are just as interesting as those, but are not so crimson with bloodshed.

"We are making future citizens and mothers. The public schools in Boston are doing a wonderful amount of good in helping and stimulating the child mind to the love of the beautiful and sane.

"[illegible] more," continued Mrs. Beatley with earnestness, "this matter of having a chaperon for your daughters and who that chaperon should be, is one of the most essential questions to be weighed, and in answering this question, teachers can offer invaluable aid."

Sneak Thieves at Harvard Get Belmont "Pickpocket" Watch

Sneak thieves at Harvard College have stolen Morgan Belmont's "pickpocket" watch in addition to considerable other plunder, from the Beck Hall suites occupied by young Belmont and by Addison L. Bliss.

The former is the son of August Belmont, the latter of the late Cornelius N. Bliss. They are in the inner college circles of wealth.

Belmont lost three watches, three razors and two rifles. Bliss misses a [illegible] suit of clothing and a pair of new [illegible].

Young men of wealth carry these [illegible] watches sometimes for the fun of fooling a pickpocket. But this one [illegible] captured by a sneak thief is a [illegible] that could not be foreseen.

How thieves ever got into Beck Hall is a mystery. The structure is [illegible] that it is a [illegible] that even the [illegible]

IT'S EASY TO PAY THE SUMMERFIELD WAY

In the past year Summerfield's has equipped thousands of charming, cozy homes throughout Greater Boston and its suburbs, and there is a certain degree of justifiable pride in the fact, because it has really done much in promoting happy marriages, and in many cases has even made them possible at all. Many are the young couples, now staunch friends of the firm, who have found it comparatively easy to set up for themselves in enchanting little homes of their own, even though they had no bank account to start with, and the bread-winner was getting only ordinary living wages.

If these couples started right in to housekeeping—so can you
If they furnished their homes in splendid fashion—so can you.
If they purchased everything by means of our Dignified Credit Plan [illegible]n you.

MAN WHO SAVED COLONEL HERE

Elbert Martin, the stenographer who saved Colonel Roosevelt's life when Schrank, the assassin fired at him in Milwaukee, is in Boston to speak this afternoon at Faneuil Hall, on his experiences during the Colonel's western tour and at the time of the attack upon his life. Mr Martin is accompanied by George Roosevelt, a nephew of the Bull Moose candidate.

"If I really did save Colonel Roosevelt's life I am glad," said Martin. "If Schrank had not been throttled as he was he would have probably fired another shot that might have been fatal to the Colonel.

"What I did was pure impulse on my part, for at the critical moment a strong feeling of hatred of the assassin and the horror of the act seized me and I couldn't help acting the way I did."

George Roosevelt, who accompanied Mr Martin to Boston, graduated from Harvard in three, completing the four year course in three, as did his brother Philip.

Get it at once. Take it a few weeks and your old health and strength will return without fail. You will feel like a new person almost from the first dose of this pleasant tasting tonic.

and in this case, what is good for the child is good for the grown-ups.

Oatmeal is an admirable food. In its combined richness of protein (which builds brain, bone, flesh and blood) and fat and carbohydrates (which supply heat and energy) oatmeal leads other foods.

If you want the authority for this statement, send for the U. S. Department of Agriculture Bulletin No. 249, and look on page 12.

There are other good foods to give children, but you can always be sure that oatmeal is a safe, sure food; and if you serve H-O Oatmeal you can be sure that it will always be properly cooked.

Twenty minutes on your stove plus the more-than-two-hours' cooking we give it in the mill, insures that.

FOSS TOURS 6TH AND 7TH TODAY

The campaign of Governor Foss and his running mate David I. Walsh, was given a big boost today when the two candidates invaded the sixth and seventh congressional districts.

Charles S. Hamlin and other prominent speakers invaded the sixteenth congressional district.

Michael F. Phelan, congressional candidate in the seventh district, and George A. Schofield, the candidate in the sixth district, accompanied Governor Foss. All the early rallies were well attended and the voters were enthusiastic.

The tour through the thirteenth district was a huge success. Hundreds attended the larger rallies in the big towns and cities, and in the small towns everybody turned out to hear the speakers. David I. Walsh took the place of Governor Foss at most of the rallies, and was well received.

Praises American.

In the little town of Millis the manager of a shoe factory closed the plant for one hour in order that the workers could hear Mr Walsh on the State issues. After this rally Mr. Walsh said:

"The AMERICAN deserves much of the credit for these crowds. The AMERICAN is certainly giving the State and National ticket good support. By printing the schedule of the rallies each day the voters are given ample notice and as a result many more attend. Personally I feel the paper is one of the strongest factors in my fight."

John J. Mitchell, the congressional candidate, was given an ovation at every rally. He made a scathing attack upon Congressman Weeks and branded him as a tool for the moneyed interests. At the close of the tour Mr Mitchell said: "I am confident of winning my fight. I really believe that it is only a question of plurality with me."

Walsh on Preference Clause.

Today Governor Foss and Candidate Walsh spoke on the same issues that have marked their other tours. Mr Walsh is making his fight principally upon the issue of whether the party preference clause in the direct primary law should be abolished. The candidate has declared that the clause should be repealed. At one of the rallies today he received an ovation when he said:

"The party preference clause was put into that primary law to please the political bosses. I believe that it is nobody's business to ask me at the voting booth on primary day whether I want a Republican or Democratic ballot. The primary ought to be as secret as an election. Thousands of men stay away from the primaries because they refuse to be branded by either political party."

Following are the itineraries of the Governor and Mr. Walsh in the sixth and seventh districts, and of Mr. Hamlin in the sixteenth:

In the sixth Governor Foss, David I. Walsh and Congressional Candidate George A. Schofield report at Merrimac at 10 30 a. m., Merrimac square, 10 45 a. m.; Amesbury square, 11 30 a. m., Newburyport Market square, 12 15 p. m. HART AND ELIOT TO SPEAK AT BANQUET

The Massachusetts Reform Club at Young's Hotel Monday will be addressed by President-Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard and Professor Albert Bushnell Hart, also of Harvard, on "The Presidential Candidates." Professor Hart is a Roosevelt man; President Wilson a Wilson advocate.

Sidelights on Big Foss Tour Through State

David I. Walsh from now on will be more charitable to the Bull Moosers. On one of his trips he was unable to secure lunch because the towns covered were not supplied with restaurants. Finally one was found in Millis, but it was owned and managed by a Bull Mooser. Dinner had long been over, but the genial follower of Roosevelt furnished the campaigner and the scribes with lunch. He consented to take some Walsh literature and even promised to read it.

"Bill" Newton was making a speech to the students at Andover. The boys were willing to cheer because their football team had an hour previous won a hard battle on the gridiron. Here is the speech and also the cheers.

"I am glad to speak to you college men"—(Cheers for Newton.)

"I am glad to find you so interested." (Cheers). "There are serious problems in this country today. You young men must solve them, but to do that you must be prepared." (Cheers for Newton and then a tiger.)

"Now I am going to touch on the tariff. Let us consider the duty on food products. Take for instance the tariff on meat. It is a disgrace." (Cheers.) "I know what I am talking about." (Cheers and yells, "You bet you do.")

The candidates arrived at this time and after introducing every one as a sterling Democrat and 500 per cent better than their Republican rivals, Newton left.

Charles Wilson, the energetic chairman of the Norfolk Democratic town committee, believes in educating the children as to the necessity of picking the right men for public office. Of course Mr. Wilson believes that no man is qualified for public office unless he is a Democrat. At a rally in his town, Mr. Wilson was going to have the school children attend, but as Governor Foss was not present he decided that the kiddies were better off in school.

"Jerry" Watson, christened as the "stage manager" by the scribes, takes good care of the Governor. "Jerry" guards the faded old campaign ulster more zealously than he would the Governor's pocket book. "It never would do," says "Jerry," "to have that coat lost. That has been a lucky coat and you know the Governor really thinks that to win he must wear it."

The strenuous campaign is telling on the speakers. All of them are hoarse and particularly the congressional candidates. John J. Mitchell, down in the thirteenth district, is very hoarse.

KNUCKLES USED TO CRACK AND BLEED

Hands Chapped, Suffered Terrible Pain. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment Five Weeks, Hands Fine.

674 Park Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.—"My hands used to chap and bleed and they pained me very much. When I put them in water they used to burn terribly, especially in hot water. My hands looked dirty; that was because they were so chapped. The knuckles used to crack and bleed and I suffered terrible pain. I tried different remedies but they never did any good. A friend told me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I got some and made a lather from the Cuticura Soap and bathed my hands, then I dried them and put the Cuticura Ointment on and put on a pair of old gloves. I was surprised to see how my hands were healed. They used to be red and rough and now they are soft as velvet. I tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for a week and they got fine. I have no more trouble with my hands since I always use Cuticura Soap and I can't praise it enough to all my friends." (Signed) Mrs. M. Weierman, Dec. 22, 1911.

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

700 WOMEN FIGHT SUFFRAGE BEFORE VERMONT SOLONS

MONTPELIER, Vt., Oct. 25.—Praying that the Vermont Legislature should not place the responsibility of the ballot upon women who do not want to vote, Mrs. E. D. B. Brown of Burlington presented petitions with 700 signatures of women of Burlington and vicinity, opposing equal suffrage, at a public hearing before the joint Legislative Committee in Representatives' Hall.

There were present nearly all the members of the Legislature, the Governor and State officers and several hundred women. Twenty-five women were present from Burlington.

PROFESSOR SHARP OF B. U. TELLS WHY HE IS FOR WILSON

Professor Dallas Lore Sharp of Boston University, declares himself in favor of Wilson as the next President of the United States. He said today:

"I have known what Mr. Roosevelt was as President. His seven years in office convince me that I do not want him as President again. I know what Governor Wilson was as president of Princeton. His ten years in office there; his lift to college life and ideals; his war on the college drone; his fight for democracy in student life; the commanding importance he gave to his office there—the wisdom, force, courage, independence, and high idealism it took to accomplish the great work there—all this convinces me that the great president of Princeton will make a great President of the United States.

Vote for Wilson, Foss, Walsh and Other Democratic Candidates

Four hundred Republican leaders and candidates from all over the State were given a severe talking to by U. S. Senators Lodge and Crane and others at Young's Hotel this afternoon about letting the Democrats get the Legislature this Fall.

"We do not want the Republican party of Massachusetts to be an appendix of Ward Eight," said Senator Lodge grimly.

"The one great [illegible] the Sage of Nahant [illegible] all the Republicans of Massachusetts [illegible] of character and reputation to the United States Senate or [illegible] as the [illegible] Lomasney?"

All this meant that [illegible] Republican leaders are [illegible] aware that a Democratic Legislature will mean a Democratic United States Senator to succeed W. Murray Crane [illegible] Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston is the likeliest of candidates and that Fitzgerald [illegible] Lomasney [illegible].

The call for this meeting was issued only two days ago [illegible] the county leaders and candidates responded in force. [illegible] emphasis was [illegible] ered in the [illegible] dining room at Young's [illegible] ance of the afternoon were told in no [illegible] way and [illegible] to get out and hustle not only for Taft and [illegible] candidates for the Legislature as well.

Speaker Grafton D. Cushing presided. Speakers in addition to Lodge and Crane included ex-Speaker Joseph Walker, "Stand Pat" candidate for Governor, [illegible] Benton, who was candidate for the nomination, former Lieutenant Governor Louis A. Frothingham, former Governor Eben S. Draper and a few others.

The [illegible] was [illegible] by the fact that Senator Crane himself was a speaker. The Dalton statesman is regarded more as a planner than a talker and the audience realized that affairs must be pressing to make him take the platform.

Senator Lodge said in part:

"We do not want Massachusetts to [illegible] herself against Taft. We should never have it said of us that, for a second time, we allowed a Democratic Governor to be re-elected in a presidential year (referring to the Russell-Cleveland campaign) [illegible]

"I have [illegible] faith in the Republicans of Massachusetts that they will not allow, despite the third party, the electoral vote of Massachusetts to be cast for Wilson and that we shall not see again the election of Eugene N. Foss for Governor.

"This campaign is filled with uncertainties. You must get busy all over the State and elect a Republican Legislature."

Senator Crane urged a heavy Senatorial and Representative vote, saying that if these district strengths were brought out there would be no trouble about the Taft vote.

[illegible] Walker declared that Foss has lost strength in the four western [illegible] and in Worcester County. He believes that [illegible] Republicans who supported Foss was now against him.

Ten Bay State Seats, Says Murray.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Democratic national headquarters have received reports from seventeen Northern States declaring that the ticket headed by Governor Wilson will be successful in those States.

Among the callers at headquarters was Congressman William F. Murray of Massachusetts, who told National Chairman William F. McCombs that he is confident that the Democrats will secure six new Congressmen in his State.

"We are sure to re-elect the four we now have and with the six others that we feel confident of the Democrats will have ten out of the State's quota of sixteen in Congress," said Mr. Murray. He added that Democrats in Massachusetts were confident of electing a Democratic Governor and of carrying the State for Wilson.

Wilson on Stump Again Monday.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 25.—Governor Wilson announced today that he will resume his active campaigning on Monday, when he will speak at two big rallies in [illegible] at a meeting of independent Republicans at the Academy of Music and a Democratic meeting at Convention Hall [illegible]

The Governor will take the stump again [illegible] Sagamore Hill say that Colonel Roosevelt is in a fair way of recovering his full strength within a few days. Should the Colonel suffer a relapse Governor Wilson will cancel all his engagements.

Wilson Is Strong in Princeton Poll.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 25.—The result of a poll of the undergraduates of Princeton was announced at a mass meeting held in Alexander Hall under the auspices of the Woodrow Wilson Club of the university. Of 1496 votes cast 1112 were for Wilson, 158 for Taft, 142 for Roosevelt, 8 for Debs.

Working Hard to Elect Bogue.

Essex County Republicans and Democrats are laying aside their party affiliations and working hard [illegible] the election of [illegible] Bogue of Lynn to the office of Register of Probate. Mr. Bogue was appointed to the office a year ago by Governor Foss [illegible] death of J. W. Mahoney, who had been in the office forty years.

During his service Mr. Bogue has won many friends for his direction of the office. [illegible] and his practice covering nearly fourteen years is advanced as one of the reasons why he should be retained in the office of probate.

In the primaries Mr. Bogue received [illegible]

Mrs. Sickles Again to Aid the General, Harassed by Debts

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—For the second time within a month, the estranged wife of General Daniel E. Sickles, the war veteran and former Ambassador to Spain, has come to his aid in his financial difficulties.

Mrs. Sickles made a plea against a sale of the personal effects of the General to Sheriff Harburger, who agreed to a postponement of the threatened sale when Mrs. Sickles promised to pay about November 10 money necessary to satisfy a new judgment against her husband.

On the other occasion Mrs. Sickles pawned jewelry that was her property when a [illegible] at the court of Spain were [illegible] knew her [illegible], to aid the General.

This action led to a report that the couple would be reconciled, but although Mrs. Sickles paid the judgment, their separations remained as before, and a settlement during their reunion was impossible.

CONFESSES POLICE DREW PISTOLS IN FATAL RIOT

SALEM COURTHOUSE, Oct. 25.—At the trial of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso today Sergeant Walter E. Spranger of the Lawrence police force, who was in charge of the police detail [illegible] in Union street on January 29 when Anna Lopizzo was shot to death, [illegible] was stoned, admitted under direct examination that he ordered his men to draw their revolvers.

"I went to the scene with six officers in a patrol wagon," testified Sergeant Spranger. "We found a large crowd there. They were noisy and menacing.

"I gave the order to disperse the crowd after they [illegible] and raised their [illegible]. They threw [illegible]. We drove them back [illegible] through alleyways and every [illegible].

"Turning, we saw the crowd [illegible] again. They were coming [illegible] with a solid line in front. Then I heard a shot. It came from the southeast corner of Union street. Twenty or more shots followed in rapid succession. After hearing this fusillade I said to the officers, 'Get your guns ready.'"

"Did you discharge your revolver?" asked the district attorney.

"I did."

"Did anyone in your command shoot?"

"No."

"What calibre is your revolver?"

"Thirty-two."

Testimony was also given [illegible] soldiers admitted [illegible] the rioters with their guns.

Grill Militia Captain.

Captain Thomas Cody of D Company, Eighth Regiment, Lynn, who testified under direct examination that no shots were fired by the militiamen under his command at the Union street riot, was cross-examined today.

Judge Sisk of counsel for the defence gave further emphasis to the claim that the bullets that killed the woman for whose murder the three accused men are on trial was fired by somebody other than the strikers, perhaps by a policeman or soldier.

Captain Cody took the stand at the convening of court. The witness testified that there were about 800 militiamen in Lawrence on the evening of January 29. He said:

"Six men in my company carried revolvers of thirty-eight calibre."

"You use Colt bullets?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you know the calibre of the bullet in Lawrence that killed the woman was thirty-eight calibre?"

"I do not. It appeared to be, but I was not certain."

"Yours was a Colt revolver?"

"It was."

"What is the penetrating power of a Colt bullet?"

"It will kill at a hundred yards."

"Did you inquire further into the autopsy of the woman killed?"

"Only what I heard through the doctor's report."

"Did you know that the bullet which killed the woman met no bone until it reached her shoulder after piercing her body?"

"I heard that the doctor said so."

Another Captain Called.

Captain Frank S. Elliott, of G Company, Eighth Regiment, M. V. M., furnished corroborative [illegible] about the riot that [illegible]. Cross-examined by Attorney Sisk, [illegible] admitted that nearly all the revolvers carried by the militiamen were thirty-eight calibre.

"What calibre rifles are carried?" asked Attorney Sisk.

"Forty."

"What is the range of this rifle?"

"I can't say."

"What is the character of the bullet, soft or hard?"

"Soft."

Cross-examined by Attorney [illegible], Captain Elliott said he was in command of a detail of twelve men at the head of Mill street on Essex street the morning of the car riot, January 29.

"Did you see the cars attacked and windows smashed?"

"I did."

"Did you do anything to interfere?"

Went to Woman's Assistance.

"No. We preserved our line across the head of Mill street."

"Did you see anything besides the breaking of glass?"

"I saw a woman roughly handled. With six men I went to her assistance."

"Then you did go beyond the line into Essex street at that time. Tell us something more about that woman. Give us some further idea of her description," broke in Judge Quinn.

"She was in a state of collapse, her hair was disheveled, she was excited, she sat right down in the street."

This was military day, and the thirteenth day of the trial. District Attorney Attwill, disposing of his squads of police and street car witnesses, mustered his forces from the State militia men.

Saw Armed Men in Mob.

Cumulative evidence about the crowds and disorder at Lawrence was offered by John E. Parker of Gloucester, first lieutenant of G Company. Daniel J. Harrington of Lynn, private in G Company, said he was in the detail rushed in auto trucks to the riot at Garden and Union streets the evening of January 29.

"There was a howling mob. They shouted 'Here comes the soldiers!' We tried to push them back. A fellow hit me on the point of the jaw with a club. I thought in my own mind that I had a right to use my gun on him."

"Never mind what you thought," corrected the District Attorney, amid a chorus of objections from the defence. "Did you see any armed man in that crowd?"

"I did. I saw a man with a revolver. He was booing, and he pointed the revolver at me. As he did I struck him on the shoulder with the butt of my rifle."

"Did you see any other persons with weapons?"

"I did. I saw two others. I saw another man with a revolver in his hand. He kept saying: 'Let's go and get them!'

"I saw a man with a knife with a hooked blade. We arrested one man and put him on the auto truck. We searched him, but found no weapons on him."

Tried to Capture Man.

Cross-examined by Attorney Sisk, Harrington said he tried to capture the man who had pointed the pistol at him. The man ran through the crowd and escaped.

Private Harrington thought there were 2,000 in the crowd. It was dusk and snowing. He heard shots on Union street.

John J. Quinn, private detective, real estate agent and special officer at Lawrence, testified about the crowds on the day of the car riot. He saw two American flags in a noisy throng of 500. He said:

"I knew Ettor and Giovannitti by sight and saw Caruso, but did not know him until later.

I saw Caruso in the Italian quarter in the middle of the street with a club three feet long. There was a small dark man with him. He had a club also. He was shorter than Caruso, about thirty years old and wore a long black coat. I had seen both these men in the crowd and on the common, January 29, when Giovannitti was speaking. I saw the defendant, Caruso, and a man with a long coat in the parade that morning. I went to the corner of Union and Garden streets and heard shots fired.

'SECRET TESTS' FOR DAKOTAN

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

Dakota Dan, walking from the North [illegible] to the East Cambridge court today, took the witness stand ready for further "secret tests" as to whether he is Daniel Blake Russell.

The startling [illegible] tests in the shape of seven weapons [illegible] posed to have belonged to Daniel Blake Russell [illegible] when in the West.

He took up the weapons, [illegible] them, snapped them and in other ways showed that he [illegible] familiar with firearms. But he would not positively identify any one of the seven guns. He [illegible] two of them looked like [illegible].

Nothing was said [illegible] that these weapons were not borrowed from a pawnshop. It is presumed of course that they weren't. Where they came from, it is expected, will be shown later.

William C. Russell [illegible] times when the exhibit was shown. [illegible] C. A[illegible] [illegible] with satisfaction. He seemed to say:

"Now we've got him."

Other possessions of Daniel Blake Russell, brought from the secret closet, are to be shown to Dakota Dan. Some of these articles consist of clothing Daniel Blake Russell once wore.

Friends on Hand

Dakota Dan's friends have not deserted him. They were in court today. They filled seats [illegible] and fronting the witness. Mrs. [illegible] was there. [illegible] were there [illegible] others [illegible] and they were there to show [illegible] and that [illegible] critical period of his case they believe in him.

Mr. Nason asked the claimant if he ever heard the name of Joe [illegible].

"Before 1860 did you ever hear that name?"

"No."

"[illegible] positive you never heard that name. I ask you to think it over carefully," suggested Mr. Nason.

"Well, [illegible] I've seen persons, but I don't know their names. I don't remember them."

"Do you wish further time for reflection?" persisted Mr. Nason. "No," replied Dakota Dan. "You may take all the time you want, but I can't sit here all day trying to think of a name."

Master Pevey broke in and said to the witness: "No, no, it is for you to think, not Mr. Nason."

Mr. Nason read with a good deal of expression, part of the testimony of Dakota Dan in which he said he was never away from home until he left in 1864. Then Mr. Nason asked if he remembered so testifying.

"In the first place," replied Dakota Dan critically, "I want to ask if there is anything on the record to prompt Mr. Nason to imitate me in his voice."

"No," remarked Master Pevey. "It makes no difference how he reads."

Difference to My Feelings.

"I suppose it don't," replied Dakota Dan quietly, "but it makes a difference to my feelings."

Mr. Nason's voice [illegible] as he read. He explained that he was suffering from a cold. Replying to the question as to testifying about never being away from home, Dakota Dan said that if he had testified to that it was so. The claimant was asked about books at his home.

"The rooms were full of books," he said. "There were many music books. Father wanted to give Willie and me a good watch if we learned music. I remember that well."

Abe Attell and Walsh Box a Draw

Fuss Over Weight and Bandages

By JACK CONWAY.

They never "come back." This weather beaten adage was proved once again when Abe Attell, former featherweight champion of the world and one of the greatest boxers the game ever produced, was held to a draw in his twelve-round bout with Jimmy Walsh at the Pilgrim A. A. last night.

Little Abe put up a hard fighting battle but he did not show that dazzling speed, wonderful footwork, clever blocking and sidestepping which won him fame in years gone by. Attell is still a magnificent ringster, but he will never again wear the featherweight crown. His ring star has set.

The decision of Referee Mattie Flaherty was a very good one. There were many fans who thought that Walsh should have been awarded the verdict. They were carried away by Jimmy's whirlwind finish and failed to take into consideration that Attell had a big lead in the first five rounds of the go.

Attell entered the ring weighing between 128 and 130 pounds. He claimed that the [illegible] though Walsh says that Abe [illegible] make 1.4 pounds [illegible] was in fine condition and was [illegible] scaled.

Keevin's Usual Kicks

Eddie Keevin, manager of Walsh, [illegible] started to make his presence known. He first said that Attell would have to remove some of the bandages on his hands before the contest could start. Abe smiled blandly and in a stage whisper said "Nothing doing, Edward dear."

Keevin then [illegible] let the referee decide whether or not Attell's bandages were [illegible]. Flemming was [illegible] to [illegible] but [illegible] Mc[illegible] then got [illegible] that the former featherweight king's bandages were all right.

Keevin [illegible] a trump card. He told Attell [illegible] two and [illegible] "For [illegible]" said Keevin [illegible] make 121 pounds [illegible] up at weighing [illegible]

Walsh is the greatest [illegible] knows this better than Keevin. Whenever he [illegible] so as to have the rounds two minutes each [illegible]

Fought Two-Minute Rounds.

There was [illegible] of [illegible] the rounds [illegible] when Attell and Walsh signed [illegible]. It was [illegible] that they would be [illegible]. Keevin did not say a word about it [illegible] before the fight when he [illegible] that he could force his terms on Attell. He was [illegible] after a long delay, which by the way wasn't appreciated by the crowd.

When the [illegible] finally got underway the "fans" were greatly excited. Attell started after Walsh with a vengeance in the opening chapter and made the local lad [illegible]. Abe jabbed with his left [illegible] and when he got at close quarters he hammered away at Jimmy's stomach with slashing rights and lefts.

Attell continued his fine work in the second, third and fourth stanzas. Walsh was boxing cleverly but Abe's weight and pressing [illegible] swept him off his feet.

Jimmy began to come in for his own in the fifth round and had Attell even. He also broke even in the sixth chapter.

Attell resorted to infighting in the seventh and had Walsh giving ground the greater part of the time. Abe was [illegible] take a [illegible] punch on the jaw [illegible] The [illegible] round was hard [illegible] the honors slightly in favor of Attell.

Walsh's Whirlwind Finish.

From then until the bell sounded at the end of the twelfth round there was nothing to it but Walsh. The fast pace [illegible] told on Abe and he somewhat [illegible] failed to [illegible] which enabled him to [illegible] many a contender for featherweight honors look foolish a few years ago. His feet did not move as [illegible] while his blocking, side stepping and ducking were none too good.

Walsh realized that he would have to do his best in order to overcome the lead that Attell had run up in the opening rounds. And he made good. He rocked Attell with slashing rights and lefts and [illegible] around him with the speed of a two-year-old.

[illegible] Abe was greatly distressed. He fought [illegible]. He was not as [illegible] so he resorted to [illegible] the best of the [illegible]. [illegible] Walsh was wise enough to step at long range as much as possible and depend entirely upon his speed in order to vanquish Attell.

Both men fought their hardest in the final session and Walsh had the advantage. When Referee Flaherty called the affair a draw Walsh and Attell both looked surprised. Judging from appearances [illegible] of the [illegible] thought that he had won. But then boxers are pretty [illegible] a hundred who will admit that he wasn't entitled to the decision where the bout goes the limit. Neither Attell or Walsh are exceptions.

Fireworks in Semi-Final.

The semi-final bout of the evening was between George Robinson, the Cambridge negro, and Joe Nelson, the human punching bag from Lawrence. It lasted the [illegible] eight rounds and was chock full of fireworks. Robinson got the decision.

Nelson was the aggressor throughout and took a bad beating. He had the pleasure, however, of giving the Cambridge darky some hard knocks before festivities came to an end. Robinson spent a great deal of his time doing a merry back two-step around the ring. He greatly respects this Nelson person.

The opening preliminary was between Tommy O'Brien of Charlestown and Tony Lorenzo of the North End. O'Brien made a whirlwind finish and won the decision. Dave Powers of Malden and Patsy De Lucca of the North End fought a draw in the other preliminary.

Diamond Gossip

Earl Gardner has joined the ranks of the benedicts. The former Yankee infielder, who finished the season with Toledo, where he was sent by the Naps, married Miss Harriet M. Denby of Sparta, [illegible] his home town.

[illegible] Magner, the former Cornell star signed by the Yankees and then released to Rochester, has again been asked to pack his grip and trek to Holyoke, Mass. After having been shuffled about among a half dozen minor league clubs Magner is [illegible] tired of traveling and would like a [illegible] berth somewhere. For this [illegible] on the trade.

"I made a mistake in signing with a big league club," said Magner. "I might have known a youngster can never break in with a big league team. My advice to youngsters is to stay away from big league clubs until a place is assured him."

It would take a Sherlock Holmes to find out which is the ball that Larry Gardner [illegible] Devore in the last game of the world's series. Already there are more claimants who swear they hold it than there are legs on a centipede.

Clark Griffith is still on the hunt for an [illegible]. Neither Moran nor Kenworthy [illegible] tried to break in, have [illegible] expectations and both will be released as they are past the age when a [illegible] player is likely to improve. Both are close to thirty.

BUSY NIGHT FOR BOWLERS

The Suburban bowling league will inaugurate its ninth season tonight with ten teams competing. All initial matches will be played at the home alleys.

Unlike former years a different rule has been adopted this season. All teams outside of the vicinity of Boston have been [illegible] Knights, Revere and Crescent, four teams which took part in last year's race.

Eddie Johns, who recently acquired control of the Noddle Island alleys, has entered Noddle and East Boston in the league which will bring the number of teams up to ten.

[illegible] last year's champion will be represented by another fast team and [illegible] Burns is confident of repeating. [illegible] will [illegible] off followed by Bill Mortimer, Jack Quinn and Bill Coombs. [illegible] average of 101 in the [illegible] League last season and also holds the alley record of 178 for a single string. Burns will occupy his old position at anchor.

The league season will continue twenty-seven weeks, Friday night being set apart each week. The same prizes will be given and the rules which governed last year's matches adopted.

Professor John J. Shields will give an exhibition of finger billiards and pool at the Elks' Club tonight for the benefit of members of the champion Red Sox team.

With but four of last year's teams, the Milton-Mattapan bowling league will begin work next Monday and will continue until March 16. All games will be rolled at Taylor's Ward 26 alleys.

From the present outlook the season gives all indications of being much more successful than in the past two years of its existence. After some tall hustling a number of applications were received and from among them picked four teams capable of filling the positions of those which have dropped out.

Following are the teams which will make up the league: Unquity Club, Mattapan, Lyceum, Walkhill Club, Hawthorne A. A., Walter Baker A. A., Mason Regulator and the Mackmen. These officers were elected: [illegible] R. Walker, president; J. F. Ryan,

Final arrangements have been completed for the newly organized M. C. O. F. league. The following courts will be represented: St. Peter and Paul of South Boston, Columbia of Boston, St. Kevins, of Atlantic, St. Marks of Ashmont, Constantine of Boston, Father McGoldrick and Mt. Ida of Dorchester and St. Augustine of South Boston.

The league will bowl every Friday night at the Mt. Washington Alleys, South Boston, beginning November 2 and continuing until April. A committee composed of Messrs. Walters, Kiley and Clark have been appointed to draw up a schedule and frame a set of rules. A large number of prizes have been donated and a successful season is anticipated. The officers of the league are: President, J. Frank Doherty; secretary, John F. Cody; treasurer, John J. McCloskey.

The new City League record of 1624 made by Chauncy in the recent meeting of that league has been the cause of much comment among the local enthusiasts.

Of course that word IF was the big issue. IF Bill Beatty had been rolling in his usual form a record would have been made that may have stood for many years to come. But Bill was not in form.

As it was, however, it shows that Chauncy and Casino with their present lineups will prove serious contenders for the title.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

If there is a harder, more unsatisfactory, more nerve-racking job than that of managing a big league ball club the writer doesn't know of it. Anyone who does is requested to name it on a postal card. Yet nearly every ball player thinks he is cut out for the job and many of them lay plans to become a manager when their days of usefulness as a player cease. Nay more, ball players sometimes scheme and connive to get the job of the man they are working under.

Charlie Herzog schemed for Fred Lake's job on the same team, and drew a fine and suspension for his trouble. Kling got Russell's ear with [illegible] of superseding Tenney.

And so on [illegible].

Managing a ball club looks mighty easy from the outside. Nothing to it [illegible] from a batting [illegible]. And then from the outside how easy it is to criticize! "[illegible] guess" is what baseball men call it. The fan blames a manager for putting in a certain pinch hitter. The manager is blamed for not taking out a pitcher at the first sign of a [illegible]. Every move on the bench is open to criticism.

"Why don't they release that fellow?" "Why don't they get a man like Ty Cobb?" These are questions one hears on every hand.

If conditions are right and the manager has plenty of luck he may land a pennant winner. Then he is a big man until the next season when he fails to land a winner. Forthwith he becomes a dub.

Every pitched ball in every game is a strain on every big league manager. If his pitcher is in the box the manager is on the anxious seat for fear the next ball will be clouted for a home run and break up the game. If the other fellow's pitcher is in the box he fears his own batter will be fooled into a strike-out. The squabbles of the players, the injuries, the hard luck, the inability of players to follow the manager's instructions, the pitcher's going bad, the lack of hitting, the responsibilities to the management, the struggle to make good are enough to drive a man insane in the baseball managerial business. Yet nearly every ball player thinks he is a born manager.

They say Joe Tinker will be the new manager of the Cincinnati Reds. Joe doesn't know what he is up against, or if he does he thinks he can overcome all difficulties. Let us see. Ned Hanlon, Joe Kelley, Clark Griffith and Hank O'Day have had this job since Garry Herrmann secured control of the club. Nothing could induce any one of these men to manage a Cincinnati team again. The fault is not with Herrmann. No more popular or more liberal man was ever connected with baseball. The fault lies primarily with the Cincinnati fans. When the team is winning, as the Cincinnati team is noted for doing early in the season, the fans flock to the park; when it loses they quit cold. The newspapers lay it on thick in days of success, but they pan the life out of the team when reverses come.

Men who have managed ball clubs in Cincinnati say it is absolutely the worst town on earth. Tinker doubtless thinks he will do wonders. If he does he will be the most wonderful man in baseball.

Umpire Rigler has sent to Bill Brown, a Cincinnati fan, the last ball pitched by Mathewson in the world's series. Brown says he wouldn't take $1,000 for it.

What becomes of the same ball now in possession of a member of the Red Sox team?

More than 200 Harvard men are on the blacklist for having sold Harvard-Yale football tickets. The writer heard of a case last year where one of the 205 blacklisted men was accosted at two o'clock in the morning by a stranger and asked if he had any tickets for the Yale-Harvard game.

"Sure," he replied.

"I'll give you $5 apiece for them."

"Nothing doing."

"Ten dollars."

"No."

"Fifteen."

"No."

"Twenty."

"No."

"Twenty-five."

The student fell. "[illegible] 'em," he said.

Next day he was called up before the authorities and given a severe [illegible], after which his name was placed on the blacklist.

His friends assert that this was a frame-up, but it is not to be believed that the Harvard Athletic authorities would stoop to such methods.

SAYS HAVERHILL WANTS TO QUIT

That the Haverhill High team is being virtually pulled into the football ring against Everett High is the declaration of Faculty Manager Marks, of Everett. The game is scheduled to be played in Everett next Saturday and uncommon interest is centred in the battle.

"The Haverhill management," declares the Everett High School teacher, "has just about gone the limit in endeavoring to either cancel or to postpone their game with us.

"Every possible excuse was offered to [illegible] the game. Insufficient guarantee, injuries to the players and even alleging that they would receive unfair treatment on our grounds were some of the arguments offered. They finally wished to postpone the game until Thanksgiving Day notwithstanding it had been advertised for Saturday.

"Whether they win or lose they will not be able to say that they haven't received the square deal at Everett," said Mr. Marks.

BRITTON BEATS FREDDIE DUFFY

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Freddy Duffy of Boston, boxer, was out-pointed by Jack Britton in their ten round bout last night. In only one round did Duffy have the better of it and that was the fifth, when by landing heavy swings on Britton's head he made the Chicago lad cover up. In every other round Britton was superior.

Jim Savage and Bill Keating of North Dakota, were scheduled to go six rounds, but Referee "Young" Corbett stopped the bout at the end of the first round after Savage had knocked Keating to the floor. When the latter arose he staggered about the ring until the bell, when the referee declared the bout ended.

The referee also stopped the scheduled six round exhibition between Tommy Hudson of Winsow, Ont., and Johnny McCrasken of Toronto, both bantams. Hudson punished McCrasken severely, and at the end of the fifth round the Toronto lad was in such bad shape that the bout was stopped.

Dartmouth Battlers Off to Meet Princeton Team

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 25.—At 4:30 this morning 1,500 alarm clocks stirred the peaceful town of Hanover, and every one in college turned out and marched to the station to see the team off for Tigertown. The squad, thirty strong, left on the [illegible] train, accompanied by about fifty rooters. Every man on the squad was [illegible] confident to wrest a victory from Princeton.

A special train will leave Hanover at 1 o'clock with 400 loyal Dartmouth students aboard, and these, with the hundred men who left early, will give all the vocal assistance needed to help the team to victory.

The team was forced to last practice in a pouring rain. The chief feature of the workout was the defensive formations to be used against Princeton. Charlie Boyle, who has seen the Tigers in action several times, was the principal instructor. Captain Bennett reported in fair condition, and in all probability he will start in the game Saturday. In spite of the numerous scrimmages and general hard work undergone this week, the team is in the pink of condition.

The team that will face the Tigers Saturday will be: Hogsett, l. e.; Engelstrom, l. t.; Gibson, l. g.; Whitmore, c.; Captain Bennett, r. g.; Estep, r. t.; Bureals, r. e.; Llewellyn, q. b.; Whitney, l. h. b.; Morey, r. h. b.; Snow, f. b. This team is equal to the eleven which lost by a 3-0 score last year. Nine of them in the lineup appeared against Princeton last year. Estep at right tackle and "Bud" Whitney in the backfield are the new men on the team, and they can be depended upon to do their share of the work.

Saturday's game will be "Bobbie" Hogsett's initial appearance at end and there is much conjecture as to what his work will be at that position.

Harvard Will Meet Cornell on Track

At a meeting of the Harvard Athletic Committee it was voted to drop the annual Harvard-Dartmouth dual meet from the track schedule. In place of Dartmouth a dual meet with the Cornell team will be arranged. This will be held for the first time at the Stadium next Spring, one week before the Harvard-Yale meet.

The Dartmouth meet has been held annually for many years and the change marks a revolution in the Harvard schedule.

The team which Dartmouth sent up to Cambridge last year was probably the best that the Hanover college ever produced, and it met defeat by sixteen points at the hands of the Harvard men, so the Crimson was placed in a position to continue or discontinue the meets with complete grace.

No reason was given for the action of the committee.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

EVERS SIGNED FOR FIVE YEARS

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—President Murphy of the Cubs has signed Johnny Evers, second baseman, to a five-year contract to manage the team. Evers succeeds Frank Chance, who announces that he will leave at once for his home in Los Angeles. It is said Evers will get $10,000 a year.

Evers says his first official act will be to get a man to fill the position of Joe Tinker, who is almost sure to go to the Cincinnati Reds. Mike Doolan, shortstop of the Phillies, and a very capable infielder, has caught the eye of the new Cub leader, and Johnny is planning negotiations with the Philadelphia management.

"I want to get Doolan if it is possible," said Evers. "I consider him one of the best men in either league, and I would be willing to make some kind of a three-cornered deal to secure him.

"There will be a number of changes made in the lineup for the Cubs for 1913. I am looking for a man to take the place of Jimmy Sheckard. He is not fast enough. He is a good ball player, but I want a faster man."

TO PLAY HARVARD.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 25.—The Johns Hopkins lacrosse schedule for next Spring was announced this morning, and one of the principal games upon the list is with Harvard University for April 19. It is also understood that the Harvard varsity nine will play at Johns Hopkins the same day.

Harvard Rivals Arrive for the Great Gridiron Battle

BROWN TEAM IN STADIUM PRACTICE

Providence Boys Confident of Winning Contest with Crimson Squad.

Primed to the hour for their annual game with Harvard, the Brown football squad arrived from Providence this morning and went at once to the Woodland Park Hotel in Auburndale where they will remain until the battle with the Crimson has been disposed of.

The squad left Providence on the 8:07 train today, arriving at the Back Bay Station at 9:16.

Light signal practice on the Stadium gridiron was arranged for this morning. This afternoon the first eleven will view the game between the second elevens of Harvard and Brown.

The undergraduate body will not leave Providence until tomorrow. It is only an hour's run from Providence to Boston and the students would rather save their money to bet on the game than leave it with Boston hotels. The feeling in Providence is that Brown has a good chance to win the game from the Crimson. In years gone by only hard luck has prevented the Brown team from scoring a victory over the Cambridge eleven.

The Brown squad put in one of the longest practices of the year behind closed gates at Andrews Field yesterday in preparation for the Harvard game Saturday. It was the last heavy practice before Saturday's game and the coaches felt well pleased at the end. The [illegible] part of the practice was spent in tackling the dummy, after which an extended signal drill was held.

A short scrimmage took place at the end of the practice, with the second team serving the ball to test the varsity defence. During the last five [illegible] the varsity took the ball and made repeated gains. Mitchell, slightly bruised from the Pennsylvania game, was not in a suit, but will be in Saturday's game. Bartlett was again at right half and will alternate with Bean in playing that position.

Yale Devotes Day to Signal Drill

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 25.—Yale's football players were let out with a short signal drill today.

Philbin and York failed to report. York will be unable to play tomorrow because of a severe cold, and Harbison, former tackle, will be given his position. Although Philbin will be used in part of the game, Harold Pumpelly has won first choice by his terrific line boring during the two days since his return. He has scored five of the six touchdowns made by the varsity.

Wheeler, another newcomer, has been picked for tomorrow's game. He ran the eleven again today at quarterback. Guy Hutchinson and Pop Corey, two of Yale's cleverest quarters in recent years, drilled Wheeler today.

"Lefty" Flynn's smashing runs featured the secret practice. Two of his dashes from kick formation netted forty yards. Walter Camp, who replaced him, duplicated [illegible] toward the [illegible].

Officials for the Yale-Washington and Jefferson match were announced by Manager Scragg as follows: Referee, [illegible], University of Pennsylvania; umpire, W. N. Morice, University of Pennsylvania; linesman, F. A. Godcharles, Lafayette.

Kelley Made Captain of Exeter Football

EXETER, N. H., Oct. 25.—Following the resignation of G. G. Kirkpatrick as captain of the football team, the members of the varsity squad elected James P. Kelley of Duluth, Minn., to lead for the remainder of the season.

Kirkpatrick's resignation, only a trifle more than two weeks before the Andover game, has filled the academy with gloom. It had been said that he was being saved for the Andover game.

Kirkpatrick's resignation is due to a back which he injured last Spring while throwing the hammer. He has been obliged to wear a harness ever since. Kirkpatrick was advised by trainer [illegible] and Athletic Adviser [illegible] against getting into the Andover game, as it might cripple him for life.

Schoolboy Sports

The first game of the Triangular League series will be played this afternoon when Cambridge High and Latin School's eleven clashes with the Newton team at [illegible] Field, Newtonville. The teams are about evenly matched and a good game is anticipated. The winner of this contest will probably prove the winner of the league series, as Brookline High, the third contender for honors, is weak this year and either Newton or Cambridge Latin should defeat Brookline.

Coach [illegible] O'Flaherty of the Cambridge School has one of the best teams that has been developed at this school for several years and today his proteges will have a chance to make good. In the games played to date the boys have done some good work and although they have not been victorious they have held the strong Everett High eleven and the fast Somerville High team down to small scores.

Coach [illegible] of Newton High has worked hard for the past week [illegible] getting them into shape for this game and he expects [illegible] winners. [illegible] Newton boys started off the season in good form, but in the later games fell off [illegible].

[illegible] Mechanic Arts and English High [illegible] the former [illegible] his [illegible] will go a long ways towards deciding the championship of Boston. Mechanics has the heavier team.

Word comes from Everett that several of the star players on the team are on the injured list [illegible]. Arthur Read and [illegible] have [illegible] ankles and Morrison [illegible].

The Manchester, N. H., High School expects to have a championship hockey team this Winter and would like to book games with some of the hockey teams of Greater Boston. Manager Joe Reeves is arranging [illegible] managers.

The manager of Arlington High has taken care of the open date on the football schedule tomorrow by signing up the [illegible]. A [illegible] game is booked for as the [illegible] O'Brien of [illegible] Dean Academy [illegible], Bullock [illegible] Dartmouth '11, Buckley, [illegible] '11, and Dadmore and Pierce of Arlington High '11.

Crimson Warriors Drilled in Plays Likely to Be Used by Opponents Saturday.

Brown jerseys and Orange stockings were the color scheme which puzzled the Crimson squad on Soldiers Field while the Harvard warriors endeavored to catch the idea of stopping the new formations. Practice was light, and the ground was slippery and the doctor was on hand, for he feared injuries from the wet grounds.

The second team, changing themselves for the time being into a species of Brown squad, undertook to pull off a number of plays which were expected to symbolize the Providence formations. They tried these first against the Team A of the varsity squad for a half hour or more but without success. The [illegible] the new style plays which were being demonstrated to them without flinching.

But when Team B of the varsity came into action the story was different. The second team [illegible] old-fashioned [illegible] Ryan raced down through the unprepared varsity [illegible].

[illegible] next [illegible] Hollister, who has been out with a lame leg, will be able to get into the scrimmage. Dr. Nichols, the squad [illegible] days more of rest after which he will have to get back [illegible] the Brown [illegible] an alternate with [illegible] making it possible for the team [illegible]. At present [illegible].

[illegible] long end runs [illegible] the Harvard [illegible] has been practicing [illegible] for fear of spraining an ankle [illegible] otherwise the wetness tended [illegible] conditions.

Cadets Score Two Goals Off Scrubs

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 25.—The cadets [illegible] scrimmage yesterday. It was the first work the men have had since the Yale game and Head Coach Graves drove them through a half hour's strenuous work.

The regulars scored two touchdowns on a strong scrub eleven, whose line was augmented by the addition of Larabee and O'Hare, who were shifted over from the regulars. [illegible] brilliant running and the work of Keyes and Pritchett were very encouraging.

Captain Devore is still out of the game. Larkin played at tackle. Markoe was in for Gillies in one of the wing positions and Merrillat relieved Hoge at the other end after a few minutes' play. The touchdowns were scored by Hobbs and Pritchett after long runs.

Waddell was shifted to guard on the scrub eleven, with Derer filling the centre position. Keyes tossed [illegible] the forward pass was [illegible] to score.

FRANK KLAUS ASPIRES.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Frank Klaus, the [illegible] middleweight, aspires to the heavyweight title. As the first step in his new campaign he is trying to open negotiations for a bout with Bombardier Wells, the British champion.

Tigers Put in Short, Sharp Scrimmage with Seconds

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 25.—Actual scrimmage lasted only twenty minutes for the Princeton varsity eleven today. However, plenty of hard work and spirit were crowded into this period.

Two touchdowns stood to the credit of the varsity before the 1916 men could gather themselves together, but they took a plucky brace which resulted in checking a steady advance for a third touchdown and compelled H. Baker to try a kick from placement on the thirty-five-yard line, which he accomplished with ease.

Captain "Tex" Pendleton was not allowed to go into the scrimmage and had to [illegible] with signal practice in [illegible].

[illegible], who has been out for a couple of weeks nursing a dislocated shoulder, appeared [illegible] was also limited to running through signals.

All the other regular varsity men played except E. Trenkmann, and he was held on the side lines all afternoon.

It is likely that Jackie Clarke, the speed merchant from Australia, will be paired with Freddie Hill, the Watertown boy, which should make a great team.

SNODGRASS SURE OF JOB ON THE GIANTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—It has been rumored among baseball men that Snodgrass will not be with the Giants next season. While it is true that Snodgrass made a fatal muff, it is also a fact that several wonderful catches by that player prevented certain defeat at the hands of the Red Sox sluggers. It's a safe bet that Snodgrass will wear a New York uniform next year as McGraw has not condemned him for his error that lost the world's championship.

CANOES TO RACE.

There will be canoe races on the Charles River Basin today. At 11 o'clock the Mystic challenge cup will be contested for. At 2:30 o'clock the event for the Eastern canoe championship trophy will be held. The races will be over a triangular course and start in front of the Union Boat Club.

Philadelphia Honors Boston Boy Athelte

News of the appointment of Fay C. Bartlett, a Roxbury boy, to the position of physical director of the Ardmore (Pa.) Y. M. C. A., has been warmly greeted by his many local friends. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bartlett of No. 593 Dudley street, Roxbury.

Ardmore, a suburb of Philadelphia, has long been in need of a capable man to fill the position, and members of that Y. M. C. A. believe they have secured him in Bartlett. Bartlett has all the necessary qualifications and can ably fill such a place. He took a two-year course under [illegible] Hebberd, director at the Boston Y. M. C. A., and attended the Harvard Summer School for two seasons. Mr. Bartlett is [illegible] athlete, wonderful [illegible] of every kind of sport.

It was twenty-five minutes and thirty-two seconds before Burns was able to make the first fall. The second bout lasted nine minutes.

THE JOB HIGHER UP

Married Life the Third Year

No. 86—Helen Interviews a Number of Girls for General Housework

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"A[illegible] you have that done out?"

"We have a laundress who [illegible] every Thursday and does the washing and part of the ironing," answered Helen. "But I'd expect you to finish whatever ironing she couldn't do in the one day."

"Well, I might iron a few pieces," condescendingly. "But I wouldn't want to go to a place where I was expected to wash. Every place I ever stayed, they [illegible] had the washing done out. What days do you give off?"

"Every other Thursday and every other Sunday."

The girl was glancing around now with [illegible] are mighty big [illegible] You wouldn't expect a girl [illegible] down on her knees and wash [illegible] floors, would you?"

"Why, yes, of course. How else would [illegible] keep them clean?"

"Why, there [illegible] and brushes and all sorts of things nowadays for hardwood floors. There ain't no need getting down on your knees."

"Yes, I have a long brush and a polisher," [illegible] Helen, "but you'd have to wipe them up with a damp cloth at least once a week."

"Well, I keep my floors clean, all right," obstinately, "but I don't want to get down on my knees."

"Now, is there anything else you don't want to do?" asked Helen [illegible] "You don't want to wash, you don't want to iron, and you don't want to get down to do the floors. Now, what else?"

That Was All Except

"That's all, I guess, except of course house cleaning. I don't never do that."

"House cleaning?" Helen repeated coldly. "Just what do you mean by house cleaning? I told you we didn't keep any other servant, and we don't expect to have any outside help."

"You'd have to have somebody house cleanin' times. I couldn't wash all this wood work."

"Oh, I see," murmured Helen. "Well, I'm afraid the work here would hardly suit you."

Helen went into the kitchen where Mrs. McGrady, her washerwoman, was helping with the work until she could get a servant.

"Oh, she was dreadful!" laughed Helen. "Why, she didn't want to do ANYTHING."

"That's the way most 'em are now [illegible]," as she hung up the tea towels. "They all want big wages and don't want to do nothing for it."

"Well, I wouldn't have had her at any price. She was the most overbearing—— Oh, there's the bell! I suppose that's another one."

Mrs. McGrady went to the door and ushered in an overdressed young woman with a near willow plume, a gold bracelet and an air of assurance.

"I got this letter yesterday," taking an envelope from her handbag.

It was one of Helen's letters. So far there had been no applicants from those Warren had written.

"You've been doing general housework?" asked Helen.

"Yes, ma'am, but my last place I was second chambermaid. That was with Mrs. Van Tassel," loftily, "the Van Tassels on Fifth avenue. Guess you've heard of them."

Helen admitted that she had not.

"Well, they're great society folks. And before that I was with Mrs. DeLacy three years. I got her reference right here," taking out another envelope.

A Good Cook

"But this isn't only chambermaid work," explained Helen, glancing at the stereotyped reference. "We keep no other servant, and you'd be expected to do everything. Are you a good cook?"

"Oh, yes'um. I don't like to brag about myself, but there ain't nothing I can't cook."

"We don't care for fancy cooking. We rarely have desserts or fancy soups. But we want some one who can cook meats and vegetables. Both Mr. Curtis and I like plain, wholesome food."

"Yes'um. Well, I ain't never had nobody find fault with my cooking. What do you give a girl?"

"Twenty-five dollars and have the washing done, or thirty and you do the washing."

The near-willow plume tossed arrogantly. "Mrs. DeLacy gave me thirty and she sent all her clothes out. Since I had my operations for appendicitis," proudly, "the doctor says I mustn't do no washing."

"Then if you don't do the washing I could only pay twenty-five."

"Well, of course, since it's a small family," with a patronizing air, "and if the work ain't heavy, I might think about it." Then as an after thought, "About the windows—of course I won't have to do them?"

Helen's patience was now exhausted. "No, we don't expect the maid to wash the windows, but I think you can find some place you would like better. I want a girl who isn't afraid of work."

"Well, if you only pay twenty-five dollars," [illegible] "you can't expect a girl to do everything."

And when the door closed after her Helen was [illegible] bang [illegible] no one [illegible] Helen was thoroughly [illegible] Mrs. McGrady could stay with her to-morrow, but Friday and Saturday were her regular cleaning days for two other customers. So they MUST get a maid by Saturday. They could not be without one over Sunday.

A Little Better

It was almost 6 when the doorbell rang again. This time it was a middle-aged Irish woman, plainly dressed. Helen liked her at once. She had not the assertive independent air of the others, but seemed ready to want the place. And for the first time Helen found herself in the position of questioning instead of being questioned.

"We want some one who is a good, plain cook and a good general housework-er, and who is pleasant and willing. I suppose you have references?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am. Mrs. Ellison, the lady I was with last, never gives written references, but she told me anybody could call her up. And here's some other references," handing Helen several letters.

"Mary O'Connor was with me for three years and I always found her an honest and conscientious worker. She is a good cook, very economical, and takes an interest in her work. I shall be glad to recommend her personally at any time.

"MRS. G. W. HULBERT."

"Yes; these are very good," murmured Helen, as she glanced through the others and handed them back.

Just then came the sound of a closing door and Helen heard Warren's step in the hall. She ran out to meet him.

"Oh, dear," in a hurried whisper. "There's a woman here now. There's been two others who were IMPOSSIBLE—but I think this one's very good. You [illegible] her [illegible] arrangements."

"Mary [illegible] Mr. Curtis [illegible] sitting room."

Warren, in his brisk, businesslike way, [illegible] a few questions and then said [illegible]

"Now, Mary, if you do your work well, you'll find a good home here. If you want [illegible] to [illegible]

"Yes [illegible] they are. What time [illegible] you want me to come on [illegible]

"[illegible] First thing in the morning."

"Oh, [illegible]" Helen [illegible] when she had gone. "Don't you think she'll be all right?"

"Yes, looks like a good sensible woman. If she doesn't drink I should say she'd make a first-class maid."

"Doesn't drink?" repeated Helen in astonishment.

"Yes, most of the middle-aged ones do. But she doesn't look like a drinking woman."

"Why, dear, you don't mean that when they get older, most of these girls drink?"

Their Future

"That's [illegible] the size of it. As a rule people don't want them over thirty-five or forty."

"Then what becomes of them after forty?"

Warren shrugged his shoulders. "Scrub women, I suppose. Not much else they could do."

"Oh, how cruel [illegible] to have to spend the rest of their life at housework, knowing that when they get a little older they will not be wanted even for that! No wonder they drink. We're always reading about the old men and how hard it is for them to get work—surely dear, it's harder for the old women."

"Yes, it's pretty tough," admitted Warren.

For [illegible] rest of the evening Helen was haunted with the tragedy of all the servant girls who grow old in the drudgery of housework, and who [illegible] only look forward in their old age to the greater drudgery of the scrub woman.

And when they are too old and too [illegible] for scrub women—what then?

Clever Once Too Often

CLEVER wasn't the word for it. He was simply bubbling over with [illegible]. He was looking for a seat in the [illegible] but there were no corners left.

Suddenly he conceived a [illegible] idea. Assuming an official air, he stalked to the [illegible] of the car and cried in a stentorian [illegible]

"[illegible] isn't going."

[illegible] the young man's face was [illegible] as he comfortably settled himself.

"I suppose," he remarked, "you're the smart young man who told the people this car wasn't going?"

"Yes," replied the young man.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I HOPE that the election will come out the way I want it to come out, and I hope we are going to have a nice, easy Winter without no real cold, and I hope that the old gent will come across with a nice Christmas present for me," said the Manicure Lady. "You know, George, I am awful fond of the old gent. And I don't mind telling you, though I hate to say it on account that it might sound sort of boastful, but I think that the old gent thinks more of me, his oldest daughter, than he does of Sister Mayme."

"Well," said the Head Barber, "I see that you are up to your old trick—talking without saying anything."

"George," said the Manicure Lady, "them is harsh words to come from a barber. If there is anybody in the world that doesn't know how to talk a little and say a lot, it is a barber. I seen you get a lot of rebukes, George, in the few short years that I have been here. Goodness knows that I do not like to throw it up to you, but more than one man with a truly remarkable brain has asked you to shave him once over and talk to yourself after he was went. Don't talk to me, George, about talking a lot and saying a little. It won't make you any healthier or wealthier to give me the laugh. The back of your head is all right, down near where you button on your collar, but the rest of it ain't developed enough to put you in the class with some of the folks that come in here to have their nails did. Now and then one of them can kid me to a standstill, but the occasions are rare, as Mister Lowell said about a day in June."

"Well," said the Head Barber, "cut out the personal remarks and tell us what is on your mind about the election. Now do you want it to come out, and what is your dope about the election?"

"I kind of want to see Mister Taft win," said the Manicure Lady. "You see, George, brother Wilfred has wrote a song called 'Everybody Loves a Fat Man,' and a publisher down town told him that if the big fellow went back into the chair he would pay Wilfred five hundred dollars for the song. It ain't that I am so very keen for Mister Taft or anybody else getting back into the White House, because, between you and me, I don't think that it makes a great deal of difference who is there, but I would learn [illegible] to see Wilfred get that five hundred [illegible] dollars and twos and fives, to say nothing of the carfares that he has tapped me for. I should say that he owes me at least two hundred dollars that he jimmied out of me as soon as I got my [illegible]. And I will say one thing for that boy, George. He will pay back every cent he owes when he has the money—only he never has it. So I am pulling for Taft to win."

"I was kind of figuring that Wilson would win," said the Head Barber.

"That's all you ever do," said the Manicure Lady, "you kind of figure. Don't [illegible] politics. Women has got more to [illegible] than men about politics and everything. All I have got to say is that the day will come when woman will have her say."

"That day came when Adam shook hands with Eve," said the Head Barber.

Not to Be Caught.

"Now, gentlemen!" called the auctioneer hoarsely, as he held up a suspiciously yellow "gold" watch. "What's offered for this [illegible] beautiful chronometer? Guaranteed [illegible] warranted to keep good time—er—and——"

Even he couldn't think of things to say [illegible] the [illegible] was selling.

All eyes turned quickly to the spot where stood the auctioneer's innocent victim.

"Well, then," said the young man, composedly, "I'll bid you—good night!"

Save your Hair! Beautify it! Invigorate your scalp! Danderine grows hair and we can prove it.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance, an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and prove to yourself to-night now that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

READY MONEY

The Thrilling Love Story of a Poor Young Man Who Got Rich and a Counterfeiter Who Reformed

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

Copyright, 1912, by H. H. Frazee and James Montgomery

"UM!" West was silent for a moment and then he went on in the same tone of kindly advice. "Now, if you're just starting out to be his pal, it's a good time to quit. We picked him up two days ago. We've seen him around with you, but as long as you didn't appear to have any money we didn't have anything to work on. You fooled us when you went over and dined on Eighth avenue; but this morning we find that you've got a lot of money. I know it! Now, two and two add up and make four. Walker had furnished you with the money and you have passed it. If you'll tell me the truth I'll guarantee you immunity. You can swear that he gave you the counterfeit to pass and that he told you it was genuine, and that you believed him. If you'll do that you'll go free. "If you don't"—the detective's face set hard—"I'll railroad you as his pal. When did he give you the money to pass?"

"He never gave me any money to pass," replied Steve quietly.

"What are you lying for?" demanded the detective. "Quinn!" One of his men hastened in. West pointed to Steve. "Take him in there and search him." Instantly Steve was handcuffed and disappeared with the detective into another room. A few minutes later one of the other men reappeared. He had a small revolver in his hand.

"Another one, eh?" said West admiringly.

Real Money

"Automatic—same old West!" Hammond handed him some money. "A thousand-dollar bill!" he scrutinized it carefully. "This isn't phoney! It's the real stuff!"

"Yes," nodded the other.

"How much is here?"

"Two one thousand bills and five hundred in small bills."

"He's probably a rich man," remarked West. "I'll keep these. We've got to get the goods on him this time."

"Yes."

West shook his head and smiled. "Hasn't changed a bit, has he?" he exclaimed.

"Looks younger," growled Hammond. "How did Walker get out of that taxicab? I saw him get in it."

"He walked right through into another," chuckled West. "That's all right. This is the best place to get him. It's ten to one the young fellow carries the bankroll. That's what I want." He picked up some of the mining literature, glanced at it and threw it down disgustedly. "Skyrocket!"

"Here's something with the young fellow's name on it," he remarked and passed it over. West opened the envelope with a paper knife and fished out the mining literature.

"Is there anything around here but that mining stuff," he growled. He put it in a new envelope, sealed it and put it back in the bag. "Miss Tyler!" he exclaimed, reading a card in the bag. "Go in there and see what the young feller had on him. No—wait a minute! Bring him in!" he called into Steve's room and Mr. Ives reappeared under guard. West greeted him with a happy smile.

"Well, we found it this time quick enough, didn't we?" he said, as if continuing a conversation with Hammond. "Well, Walker, I'm sorry for you in a way, but you might have expected it. The young fellow did exactly what they always do—lost his head—became panic-stricken with fear and only thought of saving himself. He blew the whole story, didn't he, Hammond?"

"Yes," Hammond grinned. "He's scared to face you, too."

"I should say he was!" laughed West. "He put the entire thing on you—swears you gave him the queer and told him it was genuine. He said you had a streak of yellow and he was going to turn you down. Now, I'll tell you what you do. You tell me that he's lying and that he did know the money was queer and I'll see that he gets the worst end of it."

Mr. Ives yawned unaffectedly.

"That's old stuff, West," he said, wearily. "You'll never get away from those constable methods of yours."

West flushed and bit his lip. He really had a deep respect for the criminal's superior mind, and the criticism hurt as the blasting criticism of any competent critic hurts any artist.

"Go and get what Quinn found on the young feller," he ordered Hammond. The he turned to Mr. Ives.

"I've got all the evidence I want."

"I congratulate you," returned that gentleman, urbanely. "But you must have it!"

"I'll get it!" declared the detective grimly. Then he bit his lip again for Mr. Ives remarked sweetly:

"Oh! Then you haven't got it?"

A New Way to Work

"Take him back. I'll send for him." Ives returned to the bedroom with his guard and Hammond came back to report.

"Here's over $40,000 in checks," he said, turning the bundle over to his chief.

"A quarter."

West threw it on the table. "Ugh!" he grunted angrily. "That's strange! Looks as though they'd been cleaning up, but it's a new way of working."

"Yes," agreed Hammond. "Look at the names on these checks."

"Um! James B. Taylor—the young feller keeps company with his girl. That's her bag over there with that mining bunk in it. Big family—we'll have to keep her name out o' this. Did the young feller give Quinn any trouble?"

"No, but he's worried—believe me!"

"Tell Quinn to take the irons off and send him in here. He may help us to locate it. Let him understand that he won't be searched again. Then if they've got the money planted around here he'll stick near it or try to get it back. You watch him from in there." West indicated a vacant room.

When Steve was brought before him once more West regarded him with a look of grave pity.

"Before we tear up these rooms I want to talk to you," he said. "Where did you get these checks?"

"They were given to me," said Steve sweetly. He was recovering his nerve—battling to keep disgrace away from his sweetheart's name and cursing himself and Ives and the Sky Rocket mine impartially under his breath.

"What for?" demanded West.

"For Sky Rocket Gold Mine stock—want to buy some?" Steve offered cordially. Mr. West did not relax.

"You sold all that in one day?"

"Yes, sir."

"You suddenly sold $40,000. You're a smart little feller?"

"Oh, yes," admitted Steve modestly.

"Did you discover gold in this mine?"

"No, sir."

"I know you didn't!" snapped the detective. "You've been trying to sell that stock for six months. Now, are you going to tell me how you got those checks?"

"Read one of them," suggested Steve. "It explains everything."

"I wouldn't read it!" West snarled. "I wouldn't fall for that stuff."

"You should have looked these over," insisted Steve. He had been edging toward the desk, and now he slipped the envelope with the money in it into his pocket. At the same moment Hammond stepped in behind and passed him.

"You're right," he said cheerfully to West. "He's got it in his left hand pocket!"

And here Steve did a trick so daring and clumsy that a real criminal would never have dreamed of trying it. In the moment that the eyes of the two detectives met he dropped the envelope into Grace's bag, which still hung from the chair at his side, and when West turned to him he was holding the other one in his hand.

A Bachelor's Diary

His Happiness Is Again Spoiled

By MAX

SEPTEMBER 15.—From the day he comes into this world until the day he leaves it, every man is afraid of some woman.

And I contend that his salvation depends upon the moral character of the woman he fears. If she is a good woman, this fear is good for him. It makes him behave himself and is a factor in his final redemption.

But if she is a bad woman, then may Providence call out a special force of protecting angels!

In a subconscious way I was thinking of this while I detained Margaret Hill at the gate on our return from our little outing to celebrate our betrothal. I had told her I wanted to observe the sacred tradition of a first homecoming together, and I asked her to make three wishes.

Then I made three, and we kissed very solemnly, as befits such a ceremonial, and she laughed, and I invented other pretexts to detain her.

"But we must go in, Max," she said. "It is long past Manette's bedtime."

"I will go in," I said, "but you run across the lawn and tell Mrs. Jack how happy you have made me, and I will join you when I have carried Manette up to bed."

I wanted time. I wanted to get rid of the Other Woman, sitting on the porch waiting for me. I didn't want these two women to meet. It would be the crowning tragedy of my hapless existence!

And I wonder, Diary, how many millions there are of poor, weak men like me who have known what this experience is: A meeting of the Right Woman and the Other Woman!

And I also wonder, nay, I marvel, that in these days of saner womanhood, when women are supposed to be broader in sympathy and understanding, and have a better knowledge of man and his weakness and his temptations, that they should continue to be so merciless, so pitiless, in their judgment.

I have known husbands who have made that relationship ideal, and who have been faithful and kind for many years, and who are tempted, and slip just once! Just one little falling away, and the wife discovers it, and she never forgives!

All a man's years of love and kindness and tenderness before this one little lapse count as nothing in his favor. He has committed what all good wives regard as the unpardonable sin, and, though he may be pardoned on high, he is never fully pardoned in his own household.

His wife, so loving, so tender, so charitable, so motherly and protecting toward all others who stray, becomes as hard as flint toward him.

Perhaps it is for the best. He finds that he is afraid of a good woman, and becomes a better man.

But if I could write, Diary; if I had a pen that didn't halt and blunder, I would write an appeal for my own poor, unpardoned sex.

I had never told the Other Woman in my case that I loved her. I had never made her a promise, and if I ever gave her a caress, I solemnly swear that it was not love that prompted it.

But I couldn't explain this to the white-souled little woman by my side. It would have been like talking to her in words so vile she didn't know what they meant. Neither would I want her to know. It was because of her purity of thought, her virginal innocence, that I loved her.

It was because she was so good, and I had such fear of her judgment, that I passed through hell that night in walking up the path to the porch where Beth Leonard sat.

I detained Margaret at the rustic seat under the lilac bush, and insisted that she sit down just a minute while she gave me her opinion of new plans for making over my garden. I stopped her at a turn in the path to point out that there could be a better arrangement of the shrubbery. I grew garrulous in telling her what trees and shrubs I had planted, and even went back into the history of my grandfather who had bought the place on his arrival frof England when a very young man.

"He was here three years," I said, "and then the girl whom he had left back there while he got a footing here came over and joined him. They were married under that old elm tree, and my father and mother were also married there, and Margaret dear, would you object to our marriage under that tree, with just the Spencers and Manette and our household present?"

She was much interested, and said she wouldn't marry me anywhere else, and we stopped under the trees, while I pointed out where the preacher would stand, and just where I would meet my bride. All the time I was wondering if something wouldn't intervene to save me. I was like a man going to the gallows, and though I hung back and sought a reprieve in every bush and vine and turn of the walk, no reprieve came!

I have concealed nothing from you, Diary. I have told you all that has happened to me, reserving nothing, and in no way attempting to condone my folly. But do I deserve my sentence? They say the punishment always fits the crime, but, Diary, do you think my sin great enough to match all I have suffered since?

Subterfuges, excuses, garrulousness, no longer pevailed. Manette began to whimper in a sleepy sort of way, and with her in my arms, her head nestling down on my shoulder, and with one hand holding to the hand of the girl who had promised to be my wife, we walked up the steps.

In another moment we stood facing the woman who had threatened to make me marry her if she had to invoke the law to do it!

"CASCARETS" BEST FOR THE BOWELS

Cascaret users never have Headache, Constipation, Biliousness or Sick Stomach.

It is more necessary that you keep your Bowels, Liver and Stomach clean, pure and fresh than it is to keep the sewers and drainage of a large city free from obstruction.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

No odds how badly and upset you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A ten-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

"Here—Take These Tablets—Notice How Quickly Your Throat Trouble Disappears"

NOTHING is more uncomfortable and painful—or more likely to lead to serious complications than sore throat.

The first indication of dryness and inflammation in your throat should be a tip for you to take the "ounce of prevention." Sore throat is bad enough in itself—and it has a habit of turning into something more serious. You cannot gargle the troubles away—because a gargle cannot reach the seat of infection—the throat itself.

Wulfing's Formamint

not only gets at the trouble and kills the germs by mixing with the saliva and softly bathing the membrane with its antiseptic, germicidal elements, but also affords immediate relief from the local soreness and irritation.

Formamint can be taken any place—any time—convenience itself—no fuss or bother such as the use of a gargle makes necessary. It is a relentless germ-detective, seeking the trouble makers—the germs—no matter how deep they lie ensconced in the folds and cavities of the throat—and destroying them. Formamint is a pleasant tasting tablet—that easily dissolves in the mouth—releasing its powerful germicide which mixes with saliva and is carried around and over the mouth and throat membranes. Like all really good things—it is simplicity and efficiency combined.

"I have found Formamint Tablets very pleasant to the taste and beneficial to the throat."

From The Lancet:
"The sole object of a medicinal lozenge is to keep part of the mouth or throat one desires to treat bathed for a time in a drug dissolved in the saliva. I know of only one medicated lozenge—FORMAMINT—which meets this requirement."

Stock Prices; Financial News

Stock Markets Quiet but Firm at Opening — More Active and Lower at End of First Hour.

STATE STREET, Oct. 25.—At the opening of the local stock market this morning the tone was firm, but the volume of trading was exceedingly light. Calumet & Arizona, East Butte, Greene-Cananea and Granby opened unchanged from last night's final figures, while Adventure and North Butte were off fractionally.

After the first fifteen minutes a few of the more important coppers showed a slight fractional gain, but the trading was almost wholly in small lots. The American Mining, Smelting & Refining Company has decided not to take up the option which it held on a block of stock of the Lake Superior & Arizona Company.

New York Opening.

Canadian Pacific made the best gain at the opening of the stock market today, advancing one point to 268. The list was irregular. Following an opening rally many issues made material fractional declines. United States Steel common, after opening ⅝ higher, lost its gain and dropped ⅝ under last night's final. Amalgamated Copper, which sold ex-dividend, opened ⅝ higher, then lost the advance.

Both Erie common and preferred were ⅛ higher. Reading gained ⅝, then lost one-half of the advance. Lehigh Valley rose ½. Union Pacific gained ⅛, then lost it, then rallied again.

Pennsylvania and Southern Railway were unchanged. Texas Company, which closed active Thursday, also opened unchanged. P. Lorillard opened ⅝ higher, at 209.

The New York Curb market was heavy.

Baltimore & Ohio.

Surprise is being expressed at the fact that Baltimore & Ohio is making a seemingly poor showing in net earnings, particularly as in the closing months of the fiscal year the company was recording handsome gains in both gross and net. It should be understood, however, that decreases in net are due to special causes and should prove to be temporary. In September, during which month operating revenues increased $487,000 and net earnings lost $193,000, there were heavy floods over important sections of the main line, particularly in West Virginia, and transportation costs were abnormally heavy.

Analysis of earnings show, however, that President Willard is apparently not endeavoring to make a pleasing showing in net, for maintenance charges are exceptionally heavy. In anticipation of a tremendously big volume of traffic the roadbed and equipment are being greatly improved and the operating account has had to bear the brunt of these expenditures. Dividends, however, are being well safeguarded.

Foreign Financial News.

London copper warrants opened firm and 6s. 3d. higher at £75 15-16 for spot and £76 7-16 for futures.

American securities in London were dull and moved with a professional appearance. Canadian Pacific was firm on buying from Berlin. London 2 p. m. prices showed the market to be very irregular with the prices ranging from ⅝ above to ⅝ below yesterday's closing prices.

Mines showed steadiness in process of contangoing, but rates were stiff. De Beers at 19⅝ and Rio Tintos at 73⅝ were ¼ higher respectively.

SURE PERKINS SENT $30,000

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Corroboration of testimony that George W. Perkins sent $30,000 to Albert J. Beveridge in 1904, when Mr. Beveridge was seeking re-election as Senator from Indiana, was given to the Clapp investigating committee today by H. C. Petit, formerly speaker of the Indiana House of Representatives and a member of the Republican National Committee in 1904. His testimony was a further contradiction of Perkins' statement that he sent but $10,000 to Beveridge.

Petit was the first witness today. Neither Mr. Beveridge nor Harry C. Starr, also a Republican National Committeeman in 1904, answered the call of the committee. It is understood they will appear tomorrow. Petit testified he had understood the Republican National Committee sent $50,000 to the State of Indiana at the time of Beveridge's campaign.

What Beveridge Got.

Senator Pomerene asked: "Did you have knowledge of the receipt by anyone of the candidates of any amount from a source other than the national committee? A.—I had knowledge of sums which were sent to one of the candidates in Indiana at that time."

Q.—Who was this candidate? A.—Albert J. Beveridge.

Q. What amount did he receive, and from whom? A.—I think he received $57,750, $30,000 of which came from New Yorw. I don't recall whether it was in checks, exchange or certificates of deposit, but there were three remittances which I understood came from George W. Perkins.

Q.—How much in each remittance? A.—I understood $10,000.

Q.—From whom did you have this information? A.—From Senator Beveridge himself.

Money Sent Back.

The witness said all the money sent by George W. Perkins to Senator Beveridge had been so forwarded as to conceal the identity of the donor.

"As nearly as I recollect now, the money was all sent in certificates of deposit," he said. "There may have been some certificates of exchange, but I am absolutely sure there were no checks."

"Do you mean by that that Perkins' name was kept quiet?"

"It was not disclosed in the gift."

Petit added that the money was returned within twenty-four hours after the election. On further cross-examination he admitted he had heard of an arrangement by which $100,000 was to be sent into Indiana by the Republican National Committee. He added that this was only hearsay evidence, and that he had no personal knowledge of the arrangements.

The committee then adjourned until tomorrow.

BLAME DEATH TRY TO BROODING OVER BEING A BELLBOY

Brooding over the fact that he was a bellboy, although twenty-six years of age, is believed to have been responsible for the attempted suicide of Arthur J. Wentzell of Marlboro.

Wentzell was found waist high in the waters of Fort Meadow, Marlboro, with a bullet wound in his head over the right temple. He was taken to the Marlboro Hospital where he is in a critical condition.

For the past seven years he has been employed as a bellboy at a prominent Boston club. He left his work on last Saturday. He could not account for his actions of the past two days and told the police he could give no reason for attempting to take his life.

DRIVE TURKS BACK INTO CITY

Turkish city of Sefidji. The city was captured by the Greek army under the Crown Prince. The Turks, before evacuating the town, slew all the Greek inhabitants in cold blood.

The Bulgarian army is pressing its siege of Adrianople, following its important victory at Kirk Killsseh, which fell yesterday.

The Montenegrin ruler, who is at the head of his army, today demanded the surrender of Scutari, the most important town in Albania, following his capture of the heights of Chirki, commanding the town.

SOFIA, Oct. 25.—Forty thousand prisoners were taken by the Bulgarians when they captured Kirk Killsseh from the Turks, according to reports received here this afternoon.

These include Prince Abdul Palim Mukhtar Pasha, the Turkish commander, and several other high officers. The Turks also lost 118 guns, 10,000 tents and four ammunition depots.

Explosion Kills 800 Bulgarians.

SALONICA, Oct. 25.—Eight hundred Bulgarians were blown to bits by the explosion of a powder mine set off when the fortifications of Adrianople were attacked today, according to a Turkish correspondent's dispatch received here today.

Advance on Adrianople.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 25.—Following the capture of Kirk Killsseh, the victorious Bulgarian army under Czar Ferdinand pressed upon Adrianople today, fighting back the Turks and capturing three batteries and 1,200 prisoners.

The Turks slowly retreated from their outer strongholds into the first base of the defences of Adrianople, followed slowly by the Bulgars, who feared land mines. The Bulgarian generals counselled caution, for they did not want to be taken in a trap.

While the Bulgarians continued their march upon Adrianople, their fan-like battle line was extended. All eight Bulgarian infantry and artillery poured through the pass at Kirk Killsseh, which fell yesterday.

Details of the battle there showed that both sides fought with great bravery.

The taking of Kirk Killsseh is attributed by the Bulgars to their superior artillery fire. The Bulgar guns silenced the batteries of the Turks after a continuous artillery duel for thirty hours. While the soldiers of both armies lay upon the field in the valleys of the Moritza and Arta Rivers, trying to get a little sleep, the heavy guns of the opposing armies thundered incessantly from the lofty heights where they were stationed.

Finally at dawn, when the Turks began to fall back, their retreat was covered by two picked regiments of infantry, which braved the fire of the Bulgarian guns and in this way considerable of the Turkish artillery was saved from capture.

UNTERMEYER'S BANK PLEA IS REFUSED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Attorney-General Wickersham advised the President today that the request made by Samuel Untermeyer, attorney for the Pujo money trust investigators, on October 2, that the comptroller of the currency issue a call for the condition of national banks, in order to obtain certain data as to the relations and interests of the directors of one national bank to that of another, cannot be complied with. Mr. Untermeyer also desired to obtain the facts concerning credits on long accounts in national banks in New York.

HENRY F. MILLER & SONS PIANO CO.

Clearance Sale of Pianos
That Have Been Rented For the Summer Months

While we have always made a specialty of renting pianos for the summer season, our rental business this year was nearly double that of any previous year.

With these pianos returning from the various summer homes, we find our warerooms cramped for space. We therefore offer which include nearly all the well-known makes at prices that cannot fail to interest the careful buyer.

NEARLY 50 PIANOS,

These pianos have been used from three to six months, and while they cannot be sold for new, their value as far as actual quality of tone, beauty of design and finish are concerned is practically 100 cents on the dollar.

We mention but a few of these wonderful values, which mean a GREAT SAVING TO YOU if you are contemplating the purchase of a piano.

Wilson, Civic Engineer and Man of Science

When we act, we should act with caution and prudence, like men who know what they are about, and not like those in love with a theory. But we shall not, on that account, act with timidity, for we are certain of our ground and of our object.

With such words as these Wilson began his campaign. They are not the words of a preacher. They are not the words of a lawyer. They are the kind of words that engineers prefer to use.

The campaign of the Third Party is being conducted in the spirit of a tremendous evangelistic revival. The campaign of the Republican party is being conducted in the spirit of scrupulous legal technicalities and precedents. The campaign of the Democratic party is being conducted in the spirit of a great constructive enterprise.

People who think the proper business of politics is to settle the issues of Armageddon—to divide the good from the bad, the saved from the lost, the sheep from the goats—will naturally vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

People who think the proper business of politics is to establish abstract juristic theories and exact legal definitions—will naturally vote for Mr. Taft.

But people who hold that politics is the art of mobilizing the working forces of society and making the wheels go 'round—will certainly vote for Woodrow Wilson.

There was a time, in the early Middle Ages, when preachers and lawyers had the field of public life pretty much to themselves. In such a time a man like Mr. Roosevelt or a man like Mr. Taft would have been sure to win the suffrages of the multitude—from a man like Mr. Wilson.

But the modern man everywhere—and especially in America—has a strong bent toward practicality such as the early Middle Ages did not know. He does not believe that fields can be plowed or cities built by legal theories, or that spiritual judgments can be settled at the polls. He is, at all events, determined to be his own providence in politics, and to conform the law of the land to the facts of the outdoor world. He is looking for political leadership to the men who have the engineering point of view.

Governor Wilson's temper is the present temper of nine-tenths of the American people. In his recent speeches he expresses exactly the feeling of the American people. He has the kind of scholarship that the people are spending the annual budget of an empire to put into their public schools—the scholarship that hates pedantry and cares for knowledge only because of its use.

Wilson brings the resources of an accurate science to bear upon the practical problems of public life.

He is the most modern of all high-placed public men. He speaks plainly, with scrupulous consideration.

His administration will inaugurate a new "era of good feeling," because he will deliver us from the leaven of the Pharisees and the wrangle of the lawyers.

He refuses to be a "judge and divider."

He is an engineer, absorbed in a splendid enterprise.

You Can't Make a Hard Tooth of Pure Gold

Here Is Comfort for Some Who Have Failed—and an Explanation

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner.

That which is absolutely pure lacks strength. And that which is strong to resist friction lacks absolute purity.

In dentistry this is made clear by experience and practice.

In history it is made clear too often by the flames that burned men.

A wise dentist and doctor was talking:

"Nature limits her gifts to matter as to men."

The best and most valuable of metals is gold. But we can use it PURE only when surroundings protect it.

If a dentist builds a tooth, he cannot make it of gold pure. For pure gold will not stand the friction, the biting, the struggles that go on among teeth. A tooth all of pure gold, impervious to acid, always bright, would be an interesting institution. But that cannot be made.

Fortunately we can use pure gold in fillings. When enamel hard as flint and the bony structure of the tooth form a protecting coat, we can use the pure gold as a filler, and defy in that filling all of nature's action.

We can mix the gold with baser, inferior metal and build a tooth that will crack nuts and last a long time—but it will grow black and show the base mixture in it.

There ought to be a moral in this fact that life's friction is too much for the noblest and purest of metals.

There IS an excellent lesson in this doctor's talk. For man, in contact with the world and its struggle, is exactly like the gold that the dentists use in their work.

Many a good man has gone to the wall—because he was pure gold, and could not stand the friction. He might have lasted and been admired—a very gold tooth among men—had there been more alloy in his nature.

Here and there some man of pure gold is protected by conditions, and, like the pure gold filling in the tooth, he lasts in spite of his good qualities.

But far too often the man of pure character, free from base alloy, incapable of compromise with his conscience, is destroyed—or cast aside at the very beginning, as unfit for hard work.

Of men we can truly say what the doctor says of gold. The man TO LAST in spite of friction must have the alloy of moral hardness. Then he can stand the friction—but he turns black.

Warren Hastings, amazed at his own honesty, was a strong gold tooth with much base alloy. Of pure gold he could never have done his work. The British owe modern India, Burke owes a fine speech, to this human tooth of gold alloy.

If you examine closely the private life of a Washington or even

Age No Bar to Success of Women in Earning Money at Home

Special Announcement to Women Who Earn Money at Home

One Dollar will be paid for every letter contributed by Boston AMERICAN readers, and used in the AMERICAN, containing ideas helpful to these WOMEN WHO WISH TO EARN MONEY AT HOME. This department is organized to help women help themselves. It will suggest opportunities for money-making and will help those who wish to develop the ideas they are now using in their homes for increasing their incomes. Won't you please tell me what you are doing and why you are doing it, so that we may be of service to some woman who is struggling in the dark and who needs our help? Address MABEL BARCLAY URY, Boston AMERICAN.

This Department Will Appear in the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN

By MABEL BARCLAY URY

AGE is no handicap when the spirit within the body is young. And no wise man ever estimates age in terms of years. Many a woman of seventy is younger than another who boasts of but twenty-five. If the feelings are young it matters little about the age of the body.

And so there is no reason why you should say when you read this page, "That other women can earn money at home is doubtless true, but I, alas, am too old to learn new tricks." They used to tell us "You can't teach a dog new tricks." The only answer to make to a person who says that is: "Don't be a dog."

Most people begin dying at the top. When a person begins to think that there's no use trying—there isn't any use trying. One of the most glorious of all truths in education is that there always is hope. You, for instance, can start right where you are and develop the power you need to make your dreams come true. There is always a chance. What you desire to do with all your soul, that you can do. If you are a so-called old woman, and want easy money-making work, why not do what the writer of this letter suggests:

Looks After Children.

An elderly lady here is kept very busy caring for children evenings while their parents are attending either lodge meetings, entertainments or simply spending the evening out together, which would be impossible were there no responsible person with the children.

This is much easier than day-time care of children, as they are put to bed before the mother leaves and require little or no attention. Sometimes a drink of water.

When there are older children in the family, perhaps school children of too young an age to be left with the care of the smaller ones, but old enough to be allowed to remain up till 9 o'clock or so, my friend attends to their studying and lessons they may have and sees that they go to bed at the time their parents wish.

She will wash the supper dishes or even set bread for the mother and for this is paid extra. When there is nothing of this sort to do, she crochets lace and Irish crochet collars, for which she finds ready sale and good prices. So you see she is "killing two birds with one stone."

She is paid 50 and 75 cents an evening, according to the work and the length of time required of her. She is not obliged to be up early mornings, so this work is not hard for her.

Coat and Waist Hangers.

Many useful articles can be made for Christmas. I know a woman who makes coat and waist hangers. You can buy wire frames in stores for five cents. Cover with padding, then with ribbon. Use one yard of ribbon three inches wide for the covering. Use two and one-half yards of one inch ribbon for the covering of the [illegible]. She gets from twenty-five cents to fifty cents for each one.

Does Fine Mending.

A widow that has talent for fine mending makes $10 to $15 a week by mending and pressing fine evening gowns, and all kinds of fine lace and silk dresses for well-to-do persons that do not keep a maid. She receives 75 cents and a dollar, and even more, for each gown, according to the work, and has more than she can do. She does not advertise the work, but lets the work advertise itself among her customers and friends.

Crochets Bead Purses.

I have several ways of earning extra money at home. At present I am crocheting gold and silver bead purses for a business concern in Boston. It is very nice, also pretty work to do. They pay from $2 to $2.50 a dozen—it depends on your work and how well it is done.

a Lincoln, YOU FIND THE ALLOY. Under the test of history's acid these great names turn black. But it was the alloy that enabled them to do the hard work in spite of friction and fighting.

Less wise and far seeing than the scientific dentist, civilization is forever putting human pure gold in place of struggle where it cannot survive. History is full of hangings, quarterings, bonfires, beheadings that tell of the man or woman of pure gold used in the wrong place.

Poor Joan of Arc, burned alive when her work was done—she represents an attempt to make an incisor of pure gold. She lasted as long as she could—but she COULD NOT LAST. Pere Marquette was another of the pure gold beings worn away because they were too good for the world's conditions. Giordano Bruno was another. The man who really invented the sewing machine is never heard of. He consented to give up his idea and forego all profit when his wife pointed out to him that his discovery meant starvation for thousands of poor sewing women—he was of pure gold—but too soft for this world.

Some man, perhaps, will find a way of hardening gold so that its absolute purity and atomic integrity will be able to fight against the baser and harder metals.

But THIS is sure and no guesswork.

Humanity in time WILL devise such protection for its members, such recognition of high merit as will make it possible even for a man of pure and golden character to survive and succeed against the material conditions of life. When that day comes we shall have our real leaders and our true teachers. We shall no longer look always to some tragic failure for our inspiration. Today it is the martyr's death, the room where Socrates drank his poison, the streets where Savonarola was hooted by the men he died for that remind us of our few men made of pure gold.

Some day, like the pure gold filling in the solid back tooth with its walls of enamel, the golden men will find conditions that protect them. Speed the day.

And meanwhile—have a kindly feeling and a kind word for the man who has failed at your side. Perhaps he has been worn away because his character is truer, purer than yours.

Many a failure with sad eyes and hopeless look would have been among the world's successes had his metal been less pure.
